HUERTA ARRESTS GEN. SERVIN AND MANUEL MADERO

Troops in Mexico City Ready for Election Tomorrow—Felix Diaz "Requested" to Hurry on to Capital—European Powers Discuss Situation.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 25.—Gen. Don Jose Maria Servin, former chief of staff of Gen. Mondragon while the latter was Minister of War, was arrested today on a charge of being concerned in a plot to create a disturbance in the Federal capital on the occasion of the elections tomorrow.

Manuel Madero, a cousin of the late President Francisco Madero, was arrested today at Saltillo on account of his alleged connection with a recently discovered plot in that city against the Federal Government.

This was the first indication that had come from the Government of possible trouble.

It is not expected that any outbreak will occur, but troops in the capital are to be held in readiness for instant action and other emergency measuras have been taken to preserve order.

The police have been instructed not to do anything which would conflict with the right of the citizens to cast their votes.

Daniel and Evaristo Madero, also relatives of the late President, who had been previously arrested, are reported to have reached Tampico. They will be sent by boat to Vera Cruz, where they are to be confined in the old prison of San Juan de Ulua, pending their trial on charge of sedition.

Supreme Court to Aid Huerta.

President Huerta is to be upheld for all the acts of his administration. His elevation to the presidency likewise is to be shown to have been entirely legal. This will be done through an opinion that is being prepared by the Judges of the Supreme Court.

Several of the Judges have been engaged for days searching the records for precedents and applying them to the acts of the executive. This has engaged their attention to the total exclusion of the affairs of the courts in their jurisdiction.

It is expected that the opinion will be given by Judge Demetrio Sodi and probably concurred in by one or two other members of the Supreme Bench.

The opinion, it is said, will deal chiefly with the subject of the dissolution of Congress and doubtless will show that that act was fully justified by the alleged treasonable conduct of the Deputies.

Supporters of Gen. Felix Diaz look for his arrival in the capital today. President Huerta is said to have advised Diaz to come, in view of the various stories that have grown out of his halt at Vera Cruz.

Huerta's Staff Not Arrested.

Nelson O'Shaughnessy, the American Charge d'Affaires, says he considers the report circulated in the United States that the French Minister had called a meeting of members of the diplomatic corps to devise a plan for averting a crisis as fiction.

The Minister of War denied a report that the members of President Huerta's staff had been arrested. Investigation in other quarters also proved the report to be untrue.

European Chancelleries Exchange Views on Mexico.

PARIS, Oct. 25.—Exchanges of views are taking place between various European powers possessing large economic interests in Mexico, with the object of defining common policies there, especially a joint attitude after the elections, as it is understood that the Government at Washington will decline to recognize the result which the European Governments might consider provisionally desirable. The initiative in the matter is understood to come from London.

It is pointed out here that the joint economic interests of Europe in Mexico exceed those of the United States. It is felt there should be a concerted policy on the part of the United States and Europe.

Gen. Felix Diaz Is Invited to Mexico City.

VERA CRUZ, Mexico, Oct. 25.—Gen. Felix Diaz today received a "request" from the Mexican Government to proceed at once to the Federal capital. Col. Manuel Vidaurrazaga, secretary to the Mexican Minister of War, arrived here on a special train with the invitation, which was practically an order for Diaz to accompany him to Mexico City.

Gen. Diaz did not decide immediately to comply, and no effort was made this morning to force him to accept the invitation.

Unless Gen. Diaz alters his intentions, he will not return to the Federal capital, notwithstanding the "invitation" which was signed personally by Provisional President Huerta.

Whether Col. Vidaurrazaga bore orders to arrest Gen. Diaz was not known this morning. Diaz did not deliver a formal negative answer to Huerta's invitation.

Huerta's letter urged Diaz to come to the Federal capital immediately "for his own prestige as well as for that of the Government." It was written in affectionate terms and bore no resemblance to an official command.

Col. Vidaurrazaga's instructions apparently indicated the necessity of his returning to the Federal capital today with a reply from Diaz.

Sir Lionel Carden's Wife Is an American

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.

SIR LIONEL CARDEN, the British Minister to Mexico, who has stirred up an international hornet's nest by his recent actions in that country, married, in 1881, a Brooklyn girl, Miss Anne Eliza Lefferts, daughter of John Lefferts, head of the Flatbush family of that name.

Sir Lionel began his diplomatic career as Vice-Consul at Havana in 1877. He later was Consul at Mexico City, Consul-General to Cuba, 1898—1902; Minister to Cuba, 1902—1905, and Minister to Guatemala until his recent appointment to Mexico.

VIEW OF LONDON PRESS ON MEXICO

By Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—The Mexican situation, and more particularly the divergent views of the United States and England as to the best policy to bring about order in that country, now occupies the most prominent place in the public mind and in the press of the British Isles. It is still held in official circles here that the differences between the United States and England are not such as could possibly lead to any trouble and that they will smooth themselves out when the facts shall have been made known by Washington.

The greatest regret exists here that any signs of ill feeling should have been displayed in regard to the situation. It is pointed out by officials that England, like other powers, recognized Provisional President Huerta because she believed him to be the best man to handle the critical situation and she holds that opinion still. Should President Wilson, after the elections of Sunday, present, as it is expected he will do, a more practical solution of the difficulty, it will be sympathetically considered by England.

After all, it is argued, the divergence of views between the United States

JOHN B. CANDY DIES AS SUIT IS FILED FOR HIM

Action Filed Against Son and Brother to Regain Valuable Securities.

John B. Candy, former president of the Candy Bros. Manufacturing Co., died at St. John's Hospital Saturday at 11 a. m., almost at the same time that a suit in his behalf was being filed in the Circuit Court by James E. Newell, Public Administrator, who was appointed his guardian in June.

Saturday's suit was brought by Newell against Candy's son, Arthur B. Candy and his brother, Walter W. Candy. When Attorney Frank A. Mohr returned to his office after filing the suit he found a message awaiting him that Candy had just died.

A court order for the attachment of certain stocks claimed by Candy had just been issued when news of his death came.

The suit filed Saturday alleged that Arthur B. Candy, the son had taken from his father ten $1000 bonds of the Portland Building Co.

It was also alleged that Arthur in the spring of 1912 obtained from his father $14,700 and later purchased $10,000 worth of bonds of the General Baking Co., these bonds now being in possession of Walter W. Candy.

Candy's wife has a suit for separate maintenance pending and a former wife is suing to set aside a divorce which he obtained.

WILSON AT DEDICATION OF OLD CONGRESS HALL

Ceremony Held at Spot in Philadelphia Where Washington Gave Farewell Address.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 25.—Congress Hall, where many historic events in the early days of the republic transpired, was rededicated today in the presence of President Wilson and a great crowd of people.

Rain which fell during the morning hours and continued intermittently in the afternoon, did not interfere with the patriotic exercises which were held in the hall where Congress met from 1790 to 1800.

The old structure had been restored to almost its original appearance after years of patient efforts on the part of architects, who searched all existing records to make the building look as it did when Washington delivered his farewell address within its walls.

AUTO BANDIT IN A BANK MORTALLY WOUNDS CASHIER

Robber and Companion Flee From Chicago Suburb Toward City in Stolen Car.

By Associated Press.

ADDISON, Ill., Oct. 25.—Assistant Cashier Edward Rotermund of the Addison State Bank, was probably fatally wounded here today by an automobile bandit who escaped toward Chicago in a yellow runabout, after compelling Cashier E. W. Fischer to give him the contents of the cash drawer, about $100.

Two men are thought to have been in the car when it fled. Rutermund entered the bank while Fischer was in the vault at the robber's orders. He grappled with the bandit, who shot him and ran out of the building. Rotermund received a bullet in the left side, a little below the heart and is in a critical condition.

According to Cashier Fischer's account the robbery took place at 10:30 a. m. Fischer was alone in the bank at the time. The masked robber was short and of medium build, according to Fischer. He had gray eyes.

Deputy Sheriffs from Elmhurst, Wheaton and nearby towns were rushed to Addison, which is four miles north of Elmhurst and telegraphic orders were given for deputies to spread out and watch the roads leading from Addison.

Car Used by Bank Robbers Stolen in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—The automobile used by the Addison bank robbers was stolen at 6 o'clock this morning from the private garage of George Knab, a restaurateur, according to the police here. The identification was made from a close description of the car. Detectives and motorcycle police have been sent to cover the roads and intercept the bandits.

YOUTH'S SKULL, LEG, RIB BROKEN BY CAR

Joseph Murphy Walks Around East Bound Car in Front of a West Bound One.

Joseph Murphy, 19 years old, of 501 Marshall avenue, Webster Groves, was struck by a Manchester car in front of the Busy Bee Motor Car Co. garage at 4455 Manchester avenue, at 8 a. m. Saturday and is at the city hospital in a critical condition.

Murphy is employed as an automobile repairer at the Busy Bee garage. He had stepped off an eastbound car and was crossing the tracks to go to his work when a westbound car hit him. He was knocked 10 feet from the track.

His skull was fractured. A rib on his left side was broken and he suffered a compound fracture of the left leg.

FOUR WOMEN HUNT BURGLAR IN HOME, BUT FIND HIM NOT

They Storm Barricaded Door Only to Discover Thief Gone With Heirloom Cuff Buttons.

The Misses Lillie, Flora, Minnie and Alice Ernst, who live together at 6069 Kingsbury boulevard, had a real scare when they returned home at 10:45 p. m. Friday, after taking dinner and passing the evening with friends. They discovered that a burglar—perhaps burglars—had been in the house.

The fact that the cutlery from the sideboard was scattered about the dining room floor was not particularly alarming, but when Miss Lillie Ernst, who is principal of the Cote Brilliante School, sought to enter her room, she found that the door was barricaded from the inside.

"Oh! they must be in there!" exclaimed Miss Alice Ernst, who is a teacher in Special School No. 3.

"Let's call the police!" cried Miss Minnie Ernst, who is a teacher of music.

"Silly!" was the remark of Miss Flora Ernst, who keeps house for the quartet of sisters. "There are four of us. There is not likely to be more than one or two of them. Let's force the door and catch 'em—or him."

But the door was not to be forced. However, there was a side door opening into the room. Miss Lillie Ernst, while her three sisters stood guard at the door opening from the hall—the barricaded one—bravely flung open the side door and peeped into her room.

There was not even a man under the bed. In fact, there was no man at all. But there had been a man. That was proved by the pile of chairs, bed clothing, winter wraps and various other belongings which had been stacked against the door.

The Misses Ernst took an inventory of their property and estimated the intrinsic value of their losses at $25.

"We don't miss what they took," said one of the sisters Saturday, "except a pair of cuff buttons which were a family heirloom. If the burglar—or burglars—would send the buttons back we should forgive him—or them."

CONGREGATIONALISTS PROVE PROGRESSIVE

Adopt New Constitution With Radical Changes in Policy.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 25.—The Congregational Church in the United States is progressive. This was demonstrated here today when its national council swept aside all opposition and by an overwhelming vote adopted a new constitution containing new statements of doctrine and other radical changes in church policy.

The council made no important changes in the document as presented by the commission.

25 TRUCK LOADS OF FLOWERS SENT TO BUSCH FUNERAL

Long Procession of Bloom-Laden Autos Goes in Advance of Body and Mourners to Cemetery.

EMPLOYES FILE PAST THE CASKET IN BUSCH HOME

G. A. R. Comrades Drape Flag Around Coffin, Prior to the Private Services, Which Were Opened at 2 P. M.

Twenty-five automobile trucks loaded with the floral tributes to Adolphus Busch left the Busch home immediately after the funeral procession started for Bellefontaine Cemetery at 3:20 p. m. today and by taking a shorter route arrived at the grave in advance of the hearse. Ten of the trucks belong to the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Association and the other 15 have been engaged from various undertakers. Each truck was in charge of a member of the brewery office force.

Hundreds of floral emblems for which there was no room in the house were banked in a solid hedge on the lawn in front of the house Saturday morning.

An impressive hush over many parts of the city marked the first five minutes after 2 p. m., in accordance with a request of Mayor Kiel. Street cars stopped, factory wheels were still, trucks stood on the streets, and in many offices typewriters for the time ceased clicking. It was at the moment when the funeral sermon at the Busch home began.

At 9:30 the heads of departments and the office force of the brewery began marching in double file to view the body lying in a room in the residence, banked to the ceiling with viodence, lets and white flowers. Afterward the general employes, to the number of about 4000, marched past the coffin.

August A. Busch, son of the dead brewer, who has been at his country home on the Grant farm since he returned to St. Louis with the body, was at the house of mourning, against the advice of his physician, who desired that he remain on the farm. Busch was weeping hysterically and was said to be on the verge of a nervous breakdown. He said he would attend the burial.

It was stated at the house that shortly before his death in Germany, Adolphus Busch requested that the "Siegfried-tod" from Wagner's opera be played at the funeral. This is not practicable because it would require an orchestra of about 75 instruments. The "Ase-tod" from "Peer Gynt" has been substituted.

Branch Managers First.

The first visitors at the home Saturday were the officials and branch managers, including about 50 women secretaries and stenographers. The men wore silk hats and black clothes. They marched from a depot on Pestalozzi street, through the western entrance to Busch place, and passing through the casket room slowly, departed by the east entrance.

A blanket of violets covered the casket Saturday morning, and a broken column of white roses and carnations extending to the ceiling stood at the head of the casket. It was presented by the employes of the brewery.

Employes, branch managers, agents and business friends paid their last tribute of respect to Adolphus Busch, multimillionaire brewer, Saturday.

After thousands of men and women had been admitted to the first public view of the body in the Busch home, 1 Busch place, Friday afternoon and evening, final arrangements for the funeral provided that those who had worked for Busch or had come into close business contact with him should be prominent in Saturday's funeral exercises.

The doors of the house were thrown open at 9 a. m. As at the public view Friday afternoon, the gates to Busch place were guarded by policemen and the visitors were marshaled in double file with instructions to pass on either side of the casket.

Schedule for the Funeral.

The funeral schedule from 10 a. m. to the time of the burial was as follows:

10 a. m. until noon—Viewing of the body by foremen and other employes.

1:15 p. m.—Placing of flag on casket by G. A. R. comrades.

2 p. m.—Private services in the Busch home.

2:45 p. m.—Procession of employes escorting the casket through the brewery.

3:20 p. m.—Funeral procession in automobiles to Bellefontaine Cemetery.

The services at the home will be conducted by the Rev. John W. Day of the Unitarian Church of the Messiah. Charles Nagel, former Secretary of Commerce and Labor, will deliver the eulogy. At the grave there will be an address by Congressman Richard Bartholdt.

At the house a part of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Max Zach will play Rubinstein's "Kammenoi-Ostrow," Tschaikowsky's "Andante Cantabile" and Grieg's "Ase's Death." The compositions were greatly admired by Busch.

Arrangements were completed Saturday for simultaneous funeral services in 35 cities and towns outside of St. Louis in which the Anheuser-Busch brewery has branches. The most elaborate of these will be in the palm room of the Hotel Adolphus in Dallas, Tex. The music there will be the same as at the St. Louis services.

Busch's body will be transported to the cemetery on an automobile truck which, in addition to bearing the casket will be laden with flowers.

It was planned that all vehicles in the funeral procession should be automobiles.

20,000 Persons See Body.

The number of persons who viewed the body Friday afternoon and evening is estimated to have been more than 20,000. It was the intention to admit visitors only between 2 p. m. and 6 p. m., but when it became apparent that if this schedule was maintained many persons would be excluded, Mrs. Busch ordered that the doors remain open so long as any visitors remained in line.

There was a constant procession past the casket until 9 p. m.

WOMAN TELLS OF BRIBE TO BESMIRCH C. S. FUNK

Exonerates Lorimer Accuser Who Was Accused of Winning Her Affections.

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—On the witness stand today in a courtroom packed to the doors, Mrs. John C. Henning exonerated Clarence S. Funk, who, two years ago, was charged by her husband with alienating her affections.

Funk, former general manager of the International Harvester Co., was asked to stand up. Witness said she did not know him and had never seen him before.

At the forenoon session of court there was no mention of men "higher up" who are said by Funk to have inspired the alienation suit in revenge for his testimony in the Senatorial contest of William Lorimer wherein he quoted Edward Hines, the lumberman, as stating that he cost $100,000 to "put Lorimer over."

Mrs. Henning rarely looked in the direction of Funk, but kept her eyes on Attorney Daniel Donahoe who, with Isaac Stiefel, are defendants, charged with conspiracy in the bringing of the alienation suit. She declared Donahoe bribed her to appear as a false witness against Funk.

MRS. EATON ONCE LIVED IN ST. LOUIS, SHE SAYS ON STAND

Admiral's Widow Testifies That as Mrs. Ainsworth She Was Forced to Sell Books.

TELLS OF HIS DRINKING

Declares She Took Him to Boston Because of His "Pitiable Condition" After Wife Died.

By Associated Press.

PLYMOUTH, Mass., Oct. 25.—The appearance of the defendant on the stand today brought to a climax the trial of Jennie May Eaton, charged with causing the death of her husband, Rear Admiral Joseph Giles Eaton, by giving him poison.

Counsel for the defense had led up to her testimony by calling during the past two days numerous witnesses who described Rear Admiral Eaton as having been frequently under the influence of liquor or drugs. Today counsel sought to draw from her own lips Mrs. Eaton's story of her life with the Admiral.

It is the contention of the defense that the man died from an overdose of a drug which he had been accustomed to using.

Lived in St. Louis.

Mrs. Eaton was calm and self-possessed as she began her testimony. The jurors gave close attention to her story, which she told in a clear, well modulated voice, addressing herself always to her senior council, William A. Morse. Under the questioning of the attorney, Mrs. Eaton described her early life. She was born at Alexandria, Va., 39 years ago, she said, her family later removing to Michigan and then to Washington, where she met her first husband, D. H. Ainsworth.

Her life with Ainsworth was unhappy. She said that her husband lost two positions and that she was forced to aid in the support of the family, selling books from house to house. During her life with Ainsworth she and her two children, June and Dorothy, lived successively at Washington, Guthrie, Ok., St. Louis, Chicago and then returned to Washington, where she bought a house, paying $1200 down. Later she was forced to sell the home.

Mrs. Eaton said that she placed her daughters in a school at Frederick, Md., and then took up nursing. In September, 1905, she went to Admiral Eaton's Washington home to attend the Admiral's first wife.

The patient died a week later, but the witness remained at the home to care for the Admiral, who had been drinking heavily. Later she accompanied him to Boston at his request and because of his "pitable condition." Before meeting Admiral Eaton she had taken steps to obtain a divorce from Ainsworth and while attending the Admiral she received her final divorce papers from Chicago.

Attentive to Her Maids.

She and Admiral Eaton were married at Boston, July 25, 1906. They began housekeeping on an elaborate scale in Brookline, but because of their debts and the Admiral's intemperance, Mrs. Eaton decided to buy a place in the country. She said that she had to discharge three maids from the Brookline home because of the Admiral's attentions to them. She added that her husband had insulted her daughter, June.

When the Assinippi place was bought on Aug. 31, 1907, the family had only $500 in cash with an indebtedness of more than $12,000. Mrs. Eaton studied agriculture and bought livestock for the farm.

The witness lost her composure for the first time when she described the death of the infant which they secretly adopted in 1909. The boy was left in the care of the Admiral at their cottage at Sand Hills, while Mrs. Eaton bathed in the surf. When she returned to the cottage the baby was ill and died a few hours later.

At the time her husband appeared to be under the influence of a drug, she said, and the witness told the physician who was summoned that "the Admiral has done something to this baby."

Evidence was introduced yesterday in support of two main contentions that the Admiral was addicted to the use of drugs, and that his wife, instead of plotting his death, loved him and was loyal to him.

Stories of apparent intoxication on the part of the Admiral were told by Peter S. McNally, a newspaper reporter; Miss Mary M. Simmons, a school teacher; Lieut. R. S. Keyes, a naval officer, and Drs. Benjamin N. Blanchard and Jacob W. Brown, physicians.

Clutched Rail Entire Night.

McNally described the Admiral's behavior and appearance on several occasions, saying that he appeared to be under the influence of intoxicants, but that the odor of liquor could not be detected on him. Lieut. Keyes said that when Admiral Eaton was a Captain in command of the battleship Massachusetts he spent an entire night on deck clutching the rail.

Dr. Brown, a Boston practitioner, now serving a jail term for illicit practices, testified that at Admiral Eaton's request he had prescribed a preparation containing arsenic. The prescription called for 4600 pills, each containing one one-hundredth of a grain of poison.

The remaining witnesses for the defense will be heard Monday.

British Press Holds United States Should Be Upheld

and England is a matter not of aims but of methods.

While it is possible that Sir William Tyrrell, the private secretary of Sir Edward Grey, might assist the British Ambassador at Washington during his stay there, it is pointed out that his visit to America was arranged long before the crisis arose. He is a close personal friend of Sir Cecil Arthur Spring Rice, the British Ambassador, and upon receipt of news of Sir Cecil's continued ill health, advanced the date of his promised visit to him.

The press generally agrees with the Government officials that the differences of view between the United States and England are not serious. It declares that all that England desires is the restoration of order in Mexico.

No Hostility to U. S.

The Westminster Gazette, a Government organ, says that while England has great interests in Mexico, she cannot take the same liabilities or responsibilities in regard to that country as the United States does, although the fact of her not doing so, constitutes no sort of hostility to the United States.

The Pall Mall Gazette, an opposition newspaper, says:

"Provisional President Huerta's declaration to the diplomatic corps in Mexico City is full of superficial common sense. But despite the self-denying ordinance by which he withdraws his candidature for the presidency and despite the promise of the Mexican Government not to interfere with the elections, Gen. Huerta will remain dictator when the poll has been declared."

The newspaper points out that recognition of the existing Mexican government does not constitute support of it and continues:

"If Great Britain were indeed supporting a man whom the United States declines to recognize, the relations of the two countries would be badly strained, but there is not and never has been any question of such action on our part."

The Pall Mall Gazette concludes that England can have no complicity with any league of European nations to thwart the policy of the United States on the American continent.

The Standard says: "England's only attitude in regard to Mexico is one of strict neutrality. Even the Monroe doctrine itself cannot compel England to refrain from recognising a man whom an independent nation has entrusted with the government."

The Globe, in a long editorial article, says that Great Britain has no desire or intention of picking a quarrel with anybody over the question of Mexico, but thinks that the United States should accept Gen. Huerta's assurances that he will not become a dictator.

The Daily Telegraph recognizes the serious danger of Huerta attempting "to marshal the peole of the United States and the less interested nations of the old world into opposing camps," and says it feels convinced that the good sense and political wisdom in America will see the risk and by sagacity and restraint avoid it.

Maxim Supports Americus.

Sir Hiram Maxim, writing in the Morning Post, says the enormous growth of the Anglo-Saxon population in North America makes the eventual absorption of Mexico inevitable. Therefore, he adds, Great Britain ought not to put the brake on the wheels of progress and rightly or wrongly she should support the American policy in Mexico.

The Daily News, in a strong editorial, demands the recall of Sir Lionel Garden, on the ground that he is doing his best to help President Huerta in his design to set the British and American governments at loggerheads. The newspapers say:

"The maintenance of American friendship is the keystone to British policy. Not all the British capital invested in Mexico would compensate for the risk of losing America's friendship, and under the present circumstances it would be our duty and the plainest common sense to acquiesce in the American policy, even though we thought it mistaken.

Favors Wilson's Policy.

"But President Wilson's policy is not a mistaken one. All that has happened in Mexico confirms the keeness of his insight and justifies the courage of his conduct. We are not prepared to sacrifice the friendship of the United States at the dictation of a few rich speculators. Let the foreign office understand that."

"If he (President Wilson) would frankly show in what direction his way lies," the Daily Mail says, "it would facilitate the task of British statesmen, who, like himself, are solely concerned to restore to Mexico the boon of a lasting peace."

America to Tell Powers to Keep Hands Off.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.

The United States Government is preparing to notify the nations of the world generally that any interference in Mexican affairs will be regarded as unfriendly to this Government.

President Wilson and Secretary Bryan and Counselor John Bassett Moore of the State Department have exchanged ideas on what the proclamation to the world should express. It will be communicated to foreign governments everywhere in line with the policy established earlier of keeping other nations informed of every step taken in its handling of the Mexican problem.

The proclamation or note also will serve, it is understood, as an explicit definition of the policy of the United States toward the de facto authorities in Mexico, reiterating the principle that recognition can only be given to governments on this hemisphere founded on law and order.

It has been practically decided to hold the matter in abeyance for several days, at least until after the elections in Mexico, next Sunday.

By Associated Press.

DAWSON, N. M., Oct. 25.—Rescue crews today succeeded in working their way well into the fatal chamber No. 18 east on the high line where 200 men are entombed in the Stag Canyon Mine, and before nightfall they expect to be within a few feet of the jammed door connecting this chamber with the last on the east side high line. It is beyond this door that the great number of bodies are expected to be found, among which are those of General Superintendent William McDermott and Henry P. McShane, the wealthy young New Yorker.

That the men will be found dead is the unanimous opinion of all concerned in the rescue work. Mine experts, including J. C. Roberts and his assistants of the United States Mine Rescue Service, agree that the amount of black damp which penetrated the nineteenth chamber as the result of the explosion was sufficient to have killed all of the occupants instantly.

Huddling of Miners Puzzling.

But that so many of the miners, almost 200, should have been in the chamber, is the puzzling feature to the men who are directing the rescue work.

From the conditions found in the adjoining chamber it was believed that the center of the explosion was in either the eighteenth or nineteenth chamber and by this reasoning they are unable to see how the miners could have reached the chamber if there they are.

The rescue work has been systematized with a directing head at each phase of exploration. With the coming of the Government rescue crews the miners were given new courage and no difficulty was found in the organization of helmet crews, a task which had assumed desperate proportions when it was learned yesterday that two of the helmet men had been killed at their work. The opinion still exists that all of the bodies will not have been recovered before Sunday.

Sixty-One Bodies Recovered.

Sixty-one bodies had been recovered when the search was resumed today and 36 of these have already been buried, a union service for all taking place yesterday.

The two deaths added to the list yesterday were those of James Lurdi and William Poisi, who were among the 23 rescued alive, earlier. The men were members of a rescue squad which entered the mine in the early morning. They did not return and it was only after the experts of the United States rescue car had searched six hours that the bodies were found.

WIFE'S RIVAL AND MAN CAUGHT IN HOTEL RAID

Mrs. Flora Saddler Refuses to Prosecute Husband Found With Another Woman.

A raid on the Fern Hotel, 2702 Olive street, Friday night, at the instance of Mrs. Flora Saddler, 4588 Bell avenue, resulted in the detention of Fred Saddler, her husband, a motorman for the United Railways Co., and a woman who said she was Mrs. Anna Pendarvis, 1711 South Broadway.

Saddler and Mrs. Pendarvis were released when Mrs. Saddler refused to prosecute. Edward Simpson, proprietor of the hotel, was charged with conducting an immoral house and will be sent to police court.

Three couples occupying rooms at the hotel were escorted to the Laclede Avenue Station by Sergt. Schiefelbein and five patrolmen, who made the raid, but were not held.

Just Apply This Paste and the Hairs Vanish

(Beauty Notes)

It is not longer necessary for a woman to go through life with a face disfigured by a fuzzy growth, for if she will apply a thick delatone paste to the objectionable hairs for 3 minutes, then rub it off, every trace of hair will vanish. To make the paste, mix some water with powdered delatone. After the paste is removed the skin should be washed to free it from the remaining delatone. Better results are obtained if the delatone is purchased in an original package.—ADV.

J. N. DRUMMOND JR. IS DIVORCED IN AN UNCONTESTED SUIT

Wife Who Named Corespondent Gets Home, Child and Income of $250 Monthly.

By Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 25.—Mrs. Evera Drummond has obtained a divorce from John N. Drummond Jr., son of the late tobacco manufacturer of St. Louis.

Mrs. Drummond, who before her marriage was Miss Evera Meyer of Chicago, charged her husband with desertion and cruelty and named Mrs. Laura Eastland of San Diego, Cal., as corespondent. At the last minute Drummond decided not to contest the action and withdrew a cross complaint alleging cruelty.

In support of her charges Mrs. Drummond produced letters, checks and telegrams which Drummond was alleged to have sent to other women.

Mrs. Drummond gets custody of the couple's 4-year-old daughter, Virginia, and obtains the home here and stocks from which she will obtain an income of $250 monthly.

Bacon Says Only U. S. Marines Should Land in Mexico.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 25.—President Wilson and party arrived here a few wminutes after 1 o'clock today. The President would not comment on the Mexican situation.

On the special train bearing a delegation from both Houses of Congress, including Speaker Clark, Minority Leader Mann and others, the Mexican situation was discussed. Senator Bacon, chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, expressed the views that if any marines have to be landed in Mexico, they should be American marines.

"The interests of the United States in Mexico," Senator Bacon said in a statement, "are greater than those of any other nation. I would not dispute the right, under ordinary conditions, to land marines wherever necessary for the protection of personal property, but I think it would be inadvisable under the present circumstances for other nations to land marines in Mexico, because that might lead to unfortunate complication," he said.

Inasmuch as Senator Bacon knows the Washington administration's viewpoint intimately, it is not unlikely that some of his views expressed today will be included in President Wilson's forthcoming note to the powers against foreign interference in Mexico.

"I have no authority to speak for anyone but myself," said Senator Bacon, "but I think if the subjects or citizens of any nation need protection in Mexico on account of which, under ordinary circumtsances, marienes would be landed, it would be far better to call on the United States for whatever protection is rkquired, so that whatever may be absolutely necessary may be attended to by American marines. I say this because everyone must recognize that in the present delicate situation, it is extremely important to avoid anything that would tend to produce the slightest conflict or friction between the United States and anyone of those foreign governments."

SHOEMAKER PLEADS THAT HIS EDITOR DECEIVED HIM

John C. Roberts and Associates, Answering Warren's Petition for Injunction, Declare Latter Overstated Circulation.

John C. Roberts and his associates in ownership and publication of the New St. Louis Star Saturday filed their answer to Frederic B. Warren's petition for a temporary injunction to restrain them from interfering with his control of the editorial policy of the paper.

The shoemaker's side of his controversy with the editor of his newspaper is told in this answer, filed in Judge Grimm's court. Judge Grimm told attorneys he would consider the answer later in the day.

Roberts, in asking that the court dismiss Warren's petition, alleges that Warren in several ways has violated the contract which he made with Roberts and the Star-Chronicle Publishing Co. May 13 last.

The answer denies that Roberts entered into any agreement with Warren to continue in force any contract Warren may have made with Nathan Frank. It denies also that Roberts had knowledge of any contract by which Warren was to be employed for eight years as editorial director of the Star.

Denied the Contract.

It is asserted that Warren denied to Roberts that he had any contract with Frank.

Roberts alleges that May 13 last he entered into contracts with Warren, Fred C. Veon and John J. Olsen and that under the terms of these contracts it was stipulated that Roberts was to have absolute control of the paper. Warren and others were to give their services to the paper for five years at salaries of $100 a week each. When the profits of the paper should reach $7500 a month their salaries were to be increased to $125 and when the profits reached $10,000 a month they were to receive $150 a week.

The answer alleges that Warren's contract was obtained through his false representations to Roberts, Edward S. Lewis and Virgil Rule that the daily circulation of the paper had continuously increased since Sept. 1, 1912, when Warren first took charge of it. Warren, according to the answer, falsely represented that the average paid circulation of the Star in the six months preceding May 13 last had been 63,836 and that the circulation May 13 was 94,639. Warren, it is alleged, also falsely represented that he had through his efforts added 40,000 or 50,000 to the paper's circulation.

Warren, the answer asserts, represented that before May 13 the Star was earning a profit above operating and fixed charges. This statement, it is alleged, was made to induce Roberts to enter into a contract to employ Warren, while Warren knew that the Star's circulation was not 94,000, knew that its income was not sufficient to meet expenses and knew that in the near future it would not be sufficient.

Roberts in his answer says that after signing the contract with Warren May 13 he advanced $25,000 for operating expenses. He denies that he has been unreasonable and arbitrary or that, as charged by Warren, he disregarded the first principles of success in newspaper publishing.

Roberts denies that Oct. 1, or any other date, he adopted a policy opposed to woman suffrage, union labor or the full and free disclosure of public or private corruption. He has always advocated a fair and independent policy on such questions, he says.

Says Warren Suggested Changes.

The answer alleges that Sept. 29 the Board of Directors of the Star passed a resolution introduced by Warren and calling for the following changes: Eliminating the eagle at the top of the title page, a change in type dress, the discontinuing of catchey headlines and of large seven-column heads, the abandonment of a Sunday edition and the spending of large sums for advertising in other St. Louis newspapers.

In his petition for an injunction Warren alleged that these changes were made without his consent.

Roberts in his answer denies that these changes have been detrimental to the paper.

It is alleged in the answer that Warren failed to faithfully perform his duties under his contract with Roberts and that he did not give the paper his undivided attention.

Warren, the answer alleges, sold editorials to other newspapers and allowed them to print these editorials in advance of their publication in the Star.

It is also alleged that Warren without the knowledge or consent of owners of the paper used the presses, machinery and employes to make matrices which he sold to various other papers and for which he has failed and refused to account.

Roberts in his answer alleges that Warren is attempting to demoralize the organization and cause dissatisfaction among the employes of the Star.

The defendants who join with Roberts in the answer are Edward S. Lewis Virgil Rule, Elsey M. Roberts, James T. Pettus, Charles Van Dyke Hill, William B. Kenney and the Star-Chronicle Publishing Co.

The Judge announced at noon he would take testimony in the matter Nov. 7.

COTS FOR 'TURKEY TROT' SOUGHT FROM U. S. ARMY

Ceura Prepares for Annual Carnival and Would Get 500 Extra Beds for Visitors.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—The Cuero (Tex.) Turkey Carnival Association appealed to the War Department today in a manner that caused some amusement among the army officers in the Quartermaster's Department. The association sent a dispatch saying it would seen hold its annual "turkey trot" carnival and would like to borrow 500 army cots for the occasion.

The turkey carnival, it is explained in the dispatch, will last for three days and there will be 5000 turkeys in the grand parade each day. Ceura is proud of the fact that it is the greatest market for turkeys in the world, more than 150,000 turkeys being handled yearly.

The dispatch said that the Governor of Texas was to review the turkey parade, which would be enlivened by aeroplane races, horse trots and trick riding by some of the troopers of the Sixth Cavalry.

FACE BROKE OUT IN LITTLE PIMPLES

Red and Sore. Like Little Boils. Would Wake Up At Night and Scratch. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured in Three Weeks.

Falls City, Neb. — "My trouble began when I was about sixteen. My face broke out in little pimples at first. They were red and sore and then became like little boils. I picked at my face continually and it made my face red and sore looking and then I would wake up at night and scratch it. It was a source of continual annoyance to me, as my face was always red and splotched and burned all the time.

"I tried ——, —— and others, but I could find nothing to cure it. I had been troubled about two years before I found Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I sent for a sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and tried them and I then bought some. I washed my face good with the Cuticura Soap and hot water at night and then applied the Cuticura Ointment. In the morning I washed it off with the Cuticura Soap and hot water. In two days I noticed a decided improvement, while in three weeks the cure was complete." (Signed) Judd Knowles, Jan. 10, 1913.

It costs nothing to learn how pure, sweet, effective and satisfying Cuticura Soap and Ointment are in the treatment of poor complexions, red, rough hands, itching scalps, dandruff, dry, thin and falling hair, because you need not buy them until you try them. Although sold everywhere, sample of each will be mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

SECOND MAN DIES FROM CREVE COEUR ACCIDENT

W. D. Burgon, Injured Oct. 8 on 'Dead Man's Curve," Succumbs in Baptist Sanitarium.

Walter D. Burgon of 4167 Hurtling place, St. Louis County, died at the Missouri Baptist Sanitarium, Saturday, from injuries in an accident at "Dead Man's Curve" on the Creve Coeur Lake interurban railway, Oct. 8.

Burgon is the second victim of the accident. George B. Gregg of Vinita Park, who was injured at the same time, died at the sanitarium two days later.

The Coroner's inquest into the death of Gregg found that the motorman, W. H. Noe, was guilty of negligence in running his car around the curve at an excessive rate of speed. A transcript of the evidence in the case was forwarded to Prosecuting Attorney Lashly at Clayton for such action as he cared to take.

The "Dead Man's Curve" accident was the third serious accident on the Creve Coeur line during the last few months. Many persons have been injured in the accidents, all of which were caused by inexperienced motormen on the line.

John L. Miers, superintendent of the Creve Coeur Lake division of the United Railways, is the proprietor of several saloons at Creve Cour Lake. During the summer he opened, in addition to his saloons, a bathing pool in the lake. He twice pleaded guilty at Clayton of operating his saloons in violation of the law, and was fined.

THREATS TO END LIVES POSTED UP AS JOKE

Two Girls Who Wrote of Plan to Jump From the Free Bridge Are Found.

Notes declaring that May Beard and Kate Updegraff, both 16 years old, were going to jump from the free bridge, were explained to the police as jokes, after the girls returned to their homes at 3 p. m. Friday and ended an all-day search by relatives and police.

Kate Updegraff was discharged from work at a shoe factory Thursday for talking to May Beard, and the latter joined her after declaring a sympathetic strike. They wrote notes which were found in doorways and turned over to the police.

James Beard, 907 North Eighteenth street, father of May, and Mrs. Fannie Gerber, 2612A Madison street, sister of Kate Updegraff, were notified and helped in the search.

Puzzle in Breaking of Hotel Window.

Mystery surrounds the smashing of a plate glass window, 7 by 9 feet in the Fourth street side of the Planters Hotel Saturday before dawn. The window is near the Chestnut street corner. No missle was found. No one was seen running from the place. A street car passed just before the crash, but no one was seen to shoot or throw from this conveyance. The police are making an investigation.

PAINTER'S TALK ON SUFFRAGE STIRS DAUGHTERS OF 1812

Lieutenant-Governor Starts to Explain, but Is Advised to Quit at the Beginning.

CONVENTION AT PLANTERS

Mrs. Huntley, Society Historian, Explains Meeting Is Not "Damned Annual Row."

In extolling the delights of living in Missouri to the Daughters of 1812, in State Convention at the Planters Hotel, Friday, Lieutenant-Governor William R. Painter said:

"In Missouri we are disturbed neither by suffragettes nor suffragists."

Half the women in the audience, who frankly wish the ballot, sat bolt upright upon hearing Painter's pronouncement. They were all the more startled because in introducing him, Miss Emma Powell had said:

"If the women of Missouri had been able to vote at the last election, Mr. Painter would have been overwhelmingly elected. He is the husband of our chapter regent at Carrollton."

At the conclusion of the address Gov. Painter elucidated his reference to "Votes for women" for the benefit of reporters.

His Explanation Is Halted.

"You see," said Painter, "the suffragettes are the ones who want to vote, while the suffragists are those who are against it."

On the advice of a friend the Governor decided not to continue the explanation further until he had consulted some acquaintance of Mrs. Pankhurst or a dictionary. All this happened directly after Mrs. Elisabeth M. Huntley, the society historian, had assured a reporter that "this is not the 'Damned Annual Row'."

Mrs. Huntley explained:

"The expression 'Damned Annual Row' was unjustly applied at Washington to the convention of the Daughters of the Revolution. The expression, of course, originated from the letters 'D. A. R.' Whereas our society is the Daughters of 1812."

Gov. Painter further told the delegates that the Garden of Eden, of which the Bible speaks, was situated in Missouri. He said his authority for the statement was Mark Twain. He had, however, no additional authorities to offer.

Patriotism and Love.

Dr. Isaac Lippincott, professor of history at Washington University, tried to tell the women what patriotism is. He said he had tried to tell his history class what it is and a young man in a rear seat shouted:

"Why, you're talking about a man in love." Lippincott said he accepted the student's correction and that he now felt sure patriotism was nothing but "National Love."

Mrs. William Cummings Story, president of the D. A. R., who was a guest of the convention, told a story of a boy who in a storm at sea wrapped himself in an American flag. She said the boy told his mother that if they went to the bottom he wanted God to know where he came from.

WIFE, 20, ARRESTED; RAN MATRIMONIAL BUREAU BY MAILS

$300 in Three Months Received by Mother of Two From Prospective "Husbands."

INSPECTOR FINDS DIARY

Names of 500 Men With Whom She Corresponed Are Listed; Husband Held as Witness.

Mrs. Stella Trelleford, 20-year-old mother of two children, who was indicted March 24 under the name of Stella L. Green on the charge of using the mails to defraud men with whom she carried on matrimonial correspondence, was arrested Friday night at her home, 1516 Singleton street, by city detectives acting under the direction of Postoffice Inspector Swenson.

A large number of letters and photographs and the books in which she kept a detailed account of her correspondence with over 100 men were seized.

Complete Data in Books.

The information she had in her books about her correspondents was entered under the headings of name, address, age, children and how many, wealth, number of letters received, number of stamps inclosed, photos received, birthdays, photographs sent free by her, photographs for which she received money representations made by her, including "Father's farm" and "father crippled," photographs promised, "Do you want me to come," hair sent, "Come," Ring," Promised and Amounts Received."

The woman admitted, Inspector Swenson says, that the bookkeeping applied only to the correspondence she has carried on while living at her present address. All correspondence and records pertaining to correspondence carried on before had been destroyed.

One Sent 35 Letters, Only $2.

The book shows G. E. Schwein of Detroit to have been the most industrious of her correspondents. She received 35 letters from him and each one inclosed stamps, but he only sent her $2.

A stationery box filled with combings was seized and is held as evidence.

The woman disappeared from her former address, 905 Chambers street, last February, because some of her corespondents were becoming insistent. She had her mail forwarded to the general delivery at Chicago, but Inspector Swenson thinks she was in the city all the time. Recently information was received that a woman at 1516 Singleton street was receiving a great many letters addressed to Miss Ida Morrison. "Miss Morrison" was identified by means of a photograph as the Stella L. Green who had been indicted and her arrest followed.

Husband Held as Witness.

Arthur Trelleford, her husband, also was taken into custody when his wife was arrested at their home by city detectives at 8:45 p. m. Friday. Though not under indictment, he is held as a witness.

The records and entries in the woman's books, Swenson says, indicate that Mrs. Trelleford made about $300 in cash through her matrimonial agency in the last three months in addition to receiving gifts from many of her correspondents. Some of these gifts are said to have been in the form of jewelry and dresses. The postoffice inspectors also have evidence that Mrs. Trelleford had headquarters on Chambers street before moving to Singleton street three months ago. She had been under surveillance for several weeks.

Mrs. Trelleford told detectives that she and her husband were anxious to live in the country and that they recently purchased a 40-acre farm 52 miles west of St. Louis. She would not admit that the farm was purchased with the proceeds of her matrimonial agency.

When Mrs. Trelleford was arrested she wept and asked what was to become of her two small children. They were left in care of her mother who lives with the Trellefords.

Mrs. Trelleford at Police Headquarters admitted that she had been inserting advertisements in matrimonial papers. At the time she was indicted she had been living for seven months at the Chambers street address. In that time, she said, she had received about $300 from men with whom she corresponded.

Two Names Used by Woman.

She sometimes signed her name "Ida Morrison," and sometimes "Stella Green." Her mother, Lizzie Green, lived with the Trelleford and the impression was conveyed to neighbors that Mrs. Green was Trelleford's wife.

Mrs. Trelleford told the police that she was married when she was 12 years old. Her husband is 19 years older than she.

Trelleford made a statement to the police in which he took all the blame for the matrimonial bureau. He said an injury to his shoulder made it impossible for him to work at his trade, a machinist, and he hit on the matrimonial bureau plan and forced his wife to correspond with men and ask them for money.

Mrs. Trelleford said it was her purpose to continue her matrimonial correspondence until next March and then retire to her farm.

She is a small, slight woman with dark hair and eyes.

AILING WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Mrs. Hilbert Tells of Her Distressing Symptoms and How She Found Relief.

"At times I was hardly able to be around at all. I always had a headache and I was so dizzy and nervous that I had no rest at night. The flashes of heat were so bad sometimes that I did not know what to do.

"One day a friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it made me a strong, well woman. I am very thankful that I followed my friend's advice and I shall recommend it as long as I live. Before I took the Compound I was always sickly and now I have not had medicine from a doctor for years. You may publish my letter."—MRS. EDWARD B. HILBERT, Fleetwood, Pa.

WOMAN TELLS OF PAY FOR DEFAMING FUNK

Big Crowd Collects in Courtroom to See Attractive Young Witness.

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—Mrs. John C. Henning took the witness stand today in the trial of Daniel Donahoe and Isaac Stiefel, who are alleged to have conspired to defame Clarence S. Funk, former general manager of the International Harvester Co.

Mrs. Henning, an attractive young woman, to see whom a large crowd gathered in Judge Pam's court, testified that she was paid by Donahoe for her part in the damage suit brought by her husband, charging Funk with alienating her affections.

FIRST FREE TRADE MEAT RECEIVED IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—Upward of 1,000,000 pounds of fresh dressed meats arrived in Chicago yesterday from Canada and constituted the first importation of fresh meats here under the new tariff, which admits the commodity free.

The price ranged from 6¾ cents to 8 cents a pound, which is less than Chicago packers usually pay for beef on the hoof at the stockyards. The packers were saved the expense in this case of killing and dressing. About 30 cars were received and passed through the United States inspection. The meat went to Swift & Co. Fish shipments were also brisk, 30 carloads being received. The tariff on fish under the old law was one-half a cent a pound and it is now free.

An Appreciative Customer.

U. S. FLEET OF 9 WARSHIPS ON WAY TO MEDITERRANEAN

Grim, Dull Gray Messengers Bearing Dignity and Power of America Abroad.

HAMPTON ROADS, Va., Oct. 25.—Nine battleships, messengers bearing the dignity and power of the United States, took their leave today of the shores of America for the Mediterranean. Grim in the dull gray paint of their sea cloaks, the ponderous war machines nodded a final farewell on the swelling tide of Hampton Roads, while the captains of the fleet, headed by Rear Admiral Charles J. Badger, received their last word of instructions and farewell from Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt.

The Assistant Secretary, representing the Navy Department, and the President, came down the Potomac on the yacht Dolphin and took his place at the head of the double column of battleships swinging at anchor in horseshoe formation across the fair way of the roads. From the flagship Wyoming at the head of the column to the bulky auxiliaries lying below, all ships were in holiday dress.

Formal Ceremonies.

From the Wyoming, out across to the fair way, swung the Utah, Florida, Arkansas, Delaware, Vermont, Connecticut, Kansas and Ohio, and further down in a group the auxiliaries Celtic, Solace, Cyclops, Orion and Jason. The battleships were the pick of the Navy.

The ceremonies attending the sailing of the fleet were formal. For the time being, the little Dolphin was the ship of the commander-in-chief, and from the big ships each captain followed the Rear Admiral to pay his respects to Assistant Secretary Roosevelt.

With the Secretary was a party of officials from Washington, including Assistant Secretary of State John E. Osborn, Assistant Secretary of War Henry Breckenridge, Assistant Attorney-General Samuel J. Graham; John Burke, Treasurer of the United States; Commissioner of Corporations Joseph E. Davis and Senator Brandegee.

After the official visits to the Dolphin, the big battleships stood by to await the return calls to be paid by the Secretary.

As the tide swung in the big steel ships swung down the channel and as each vessel passed in view out to sea the farewell salutes of the departing vessels were fired.

HUGH FULLERTON IS ACQUITTED ON WOMAN'S CHARGES

Chief Probation Officer Charged With Influencing Adoption of Children.

ALL JUDGES HEAR CASE

Defense Shows That Girl Gave Socks, Necktie and Suspenders to Him.

Hugh Fullerton, chief probation officer of the Juvenile Court, was acquitted Saturday of impeachment charges brought against him by Mrs. Rose Allen of 2728 Washington avenue. Fullerton was tried before all the Circuit Judges sitting together, with Judge Withrow presiding.

The evidence in the case against Fullerton was presented Friday. The Judges took it under advisement and when they met Saturday morning they announced their decision.

Mrs. Allen charged that she had been deprived of her two children through the recommendations of Fullerton acting in his capacity as probation officer and that she had been put to great trouble and expense in regaining possession of them.

The children, Etta and Lucille Allen, 12 and 8 years old, respectively, were awarded by the Juvenile Court to William Abar Dec. 2, 1911. Abar and his wife lived in a housebcat at the foot of Kraus street. Subsequently Abar obtained adoption papers for them in the Probate Court.

Fullerton Denies Aiding Adoption.

Their mother asserted she was not aware of the adoption proceedings until after the court made the order. She charges Fullerton helped to arrange the adoption. He denies this charge. He was confirmed in this by the testimony of Devereux Henderson, a lawyer who appeared for Abar in the Probate Court.

Abar and his wife left St. Louis with the Allen children after Mrs. Allen renewed her efforts to get the girls and the mother later located them in Canada, across from Detroit, and brought back her children to St. Louis.

In her charges against Fullerton, Mrs Allen complains that he had represented she was not a fit woman for custodian of the girls and that he withheld information from the court which resulted in the girls being temporarily taken from her.

She says that Fullerton recommended that the girls be placed with Abar although the latter had confessed that he and Mrs. Allen had been on very friendly terms. Fullerton, in his statement at the trial Friday, admitted that Abar had made such a statement to him, but said there were circumstances which caused him (Fullerton) to act as he had done in the matter.

Fullerton Denies Getting $100.

Mrs. Allen and her daughter, Etta, testified to having heard that Abar told someone he would give Fullerton $100. Fullerton declared he never received a cent from the man.

In his statement to the Court of what he expected to prove, Attorney Walz said he would show that gifts had been received by Fullerton. When Etta Allen was on the stand, Fullerton, who conducted his own defense, brought out that the witness had given to him presents of a necktie, a pair of purple socks and a pair of suspenders. Fullerton told the girl that if such gifts were not from the heart he would be glad to return them.

"I still have the articles, although the necktie is a little soiled from wear, the suspenders are as good as new. I don't wear suspenders," said Fullerton. Etta answered that she had no use for the articles and that he might keep them.

Defense Witness Makes Charges.

Fullerton called only one witness, Attorney Charles F. Krone, with whom he engaged in a colloquy. Krone, in answer to questions by Fullerton, admitted he had made derogatory statements concerning Fullerton at the City Club. "Did you not speak of me there as being either a knave or a fool?" asked Fullerton.

"I did," Krone admitted.

"Which?" asked Fullerton.

"Both," answered the witness.

On motion of Judge Koerner all of Krone's testimony was stricken out as without bearing on the case. Fullerton explained he had called Krone because the latter had made some "nasty charges" in connection with the Allen-Abar case.

"The charges, if true, would not only oust me from my present job, but would bar me from polite society," Fullerton said.

Fullerton made a statement of his case and declared that everything he did was conscientiously done and for the good of the children. He denied all intimations of any improper influence and declared that the houseboat in which Abar had lived was nicely furnished and comfortable and contained five rooms.

Concluding his statement, Fullerton said that the present proceedings are more of an assault on the Juvenile Court system than on him. "Permit me to say," said Fullerton, "that the Juvenile Court has a Judge only four days of the week and that because of this you are forcing your probation officers to make judicial decisions every day that they should not be compelled to make. It makes little difference whether I remain as your chief probation officer, but it is not I, so much as it is the court, that is concerned in this attack."

Judge McQuillin took issue with Fullerton on this, saying:

"You are wrong in your conclusion it is an attack on the court. It is an attack on you and your administration of the probation office."

Fullerton was appointed by the Circuit Judges about three years ago.

CASCARETS FOR SLUGGISH BOWELS, BILIOUS HEADACHE AND SALLOW SKIN.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headache come from a torpid liver and constipated bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret tonight will surely straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box will keep your head clear, stomach sweet, liver and bowels regular and make you feel cheerful and bully for months.

Don't forget your children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too, occasionally.—ADV.

Cramps and Backache ?

"I suffered from many pains for four years," says Mrs. Della Gates, of Cobden, Ill. "I was tired and worn out and had the blues. The doctors said I had womanly troubles, but it seemed they could do me no good. I was advised to take CARDUI, and can say after taking 6 bottles, that I just feel fine. It relieved me from pain and cured my cramping and backache. I can certainly recommend it." Thousands of women who now suffer from womanly troubles could be relieved if they would follow Mrs. Gates' example. Are you one of these? If you need a good strengthening tonic we recommend that you

STOMACH SICK, SOUR, UPSET AND FULL OF GAS?—TRY PAPE'S DIAPEPSIN.

Do some foods you eat hit back—taste good, but work badly; ferment into stubborn lumps and cause a sick, sour, gassy stomach? Now, Mr. or Mrs. Dyspeptic, jot this down: Pape's Diapepsin digests everything, leaving nothing to sour and upset you. No difference how badly your stomach is disordered, you get happy relief in five minutes, but what pleases you most is that it strengthens and regulates your stomach so you can eat your favorite foods without fear. Most remedies give you relief sometimes—they are slow, but not sure. Diapepsin is quick, positive and puts your stomach in a healthy condition so the misery won't come back.

You feel different as soon as Pape's Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach—distress just vanishes—your stomach gets sweet, no gases, no belching, no eructations of undigested food, your head clears and you feel fine.

Put an end to stomach trouble by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder.—ADV.

PERSIMMONS

BEAR me, Pomona, to that garden blest
In which persimmons are de-puckered quite;
Of all earth's fruits, I think, I love them best,
Except for that one fault, and that is slight.
Our Government, so I am told,
Depuckers them, to leave them sweet
And finely flavored when the nights grow cold
And Jack Frost ventures from his deep retreat.

If that is true, sweet Goddess, lead me thence,
And let me taste of that depuckered fruit;
Nor let my gratitude, in indolence,
For that great blessing to continue mute.
Invite the muse, that being spared the puck,
We two, appropriately, may conspire
To such rapt praise as never yet was struck
Collaboratively from mortal lyre.

"Uncle Sam, Wonder Worker," by W. A. DuPuy. (Stokes.)

NEW STANDARD DICTIONARY.

THE POST-DISPATCH has received a copy of what is possibly the most remarkable single-volume dictionary of the English language. It is a magnificent book of over 3000 pages, handsomely bound and printed in a style to rejoice the heart of a type connoisseur.

It has taken four years to complete this dictionary and the labors of 380 editors and specialists. It is a revision of the Standard Dictionary of 1894, but contains many new features and a wealth of new material. It records and defines no less than 450,000 terms, which is claimed to be at least 50,000 more than any other dictionary irrespective of size. All the most recent developments in science, the arts, commerce, exploration, etc., are covered in definition, pronunciation and description, verbal and, where necessary, by illustration or diagram.

One of the most helpful changes in this dictionary is the merging into the general alphabetical arrangement of all the various features usually covered in appendices. You don't have to turn to the end of the book for proper names, scientific terms, biographical names, characters in fiction, pictures of national flags, emblems, etc. Everything is found in its place as an integral part of the alphabetical scheme.

In arranging the meaning of words, the most common are given first. This is a great improvement when one comes to consider that many terms have so many meanings that it requires a whole column to give them all. Former dictionaries have made no atempt at arrangement of this kind.

There are more than 7000 illustrations, and the full page colored pictures of butterflies, birds, precious stones, wild-flowers, etc., surpass anything of the kind in similar works.

In the fullness of its descriptions, as, for instance, with regard to objects of use—tea, tobacco, etc., or branches of knowledge or achievement, the information is so full and complete that in many cases the dictionary will serve as an encyclopedia. This will in part explain why the New Standard Dictionary is said to have been the most expensive book published, having cost up to completion no less than $1,450,000. It contains 32,000 quotations, with full credit to author and page of his work; 7000 separate lists of synonyms, nearly 5000 antonyms, given by no other dictionary; exact dates of all events when ascertainable; terms used in forestry and logging; meteorology, and numerous other improvements that are unique and invaluable in a work of the kind.

It will be received with delight in all newspaper offices, schools and colleges and will doubtless put all other dictionary publishers on their mettle to produce something better if they can. (Funk & Wagnalls.)

TRAGEDY OF A PARSON'S SON.

BASIL KING, who has turned from preaching in the pulpit to teaching through the writing of romance, gives, in "The Way Home" a sketch of a life wasted through the abandonment of religious principle and the adoption of a rule of self-seeking without regard for others.

Charlie Grace, the central figure in this novel, finds that the wealthy people in his father's church are mostly hypocrites. Excusing himself on this ground, he adopts the principle of "dog eat dog" as his guide in life. Instead of taking orders, he goes into business, knifing rivals and gaining wealth unscrupulously. His ways with women are of the same character, although, as a gentleman's son he lives decently in the eyes of the world. His course is cut short by a slow but fatal sickness in comparative youth. This brings him to his senses, effects a reconciliation between himself and wife, and the author leaves him finding comfort and strength from the religion he had given up as useless.

In "The Way Home" we make Charlie Grace's acquaintance as a little boy and follow his career as he grows up, thus getting into sympathy with what might otherwise strike us as an utterly ignoble character. Mr. King shows how environment and economic conditions affect men. For it was the threat of poverty, as he saw his father abandoned by his parishioners in his old age, that started young Grace on his course as a business bandit. (Harper's.)

AN OZARK STORY.

"BILL" RUDOLPH and George Collins, Franklin County bandits who were hung eight years ago for killing Detective Schumacher when he tried to arrest them for robbing the bank at Union, Mo., are thinly-disguised characters in "The Call of the Hills," an Ozark story by Marshall B. Van Leer, a former St. Louisan, who pictures the Missouri mountains and their people as the Kentucky mountains and their people are pictured in "The Heart of the Hills" and "The Call of the Cumberland."

The author was formerly a student at McKendree College, Lebanon, Ill., and entered college. His home now is at Glasco, Kan.

"The Call of the Hills" is the story of Ray Jones, a young school teacher, to whom the call of the hills is a call to the duty of devoting his life to the uplift of the hill people, which he heeds at the cost of ambition.

It is at an "apple peeling" at a Franklin County hill home that Rudolph and Collins make their appearance. Among the guests were two young men who appeared to be pals and yet they were as unlike as could be. "The larger one of the two was a typical man of the hills. His face was not bad-looking, save for the eyes. The other was of slighter build and had an intelligent face. One could tell at first sight that he was not a native of that country."

He introduces himself to the teacher as Samuel Carson and introduces the other as Bill Rupert.

The teacher's suspicions are aroused when he encounters Collins on his way to a rendezvous at Spring Creek Mill. Jones earns Rudolph's enmity by supplanting him in the affections of Roxy Nettles, the teacher's best pupil. Rudolph and Jones meet as Rudolph is on his way to the mill to meet Collins. Ruseveral nearby Illinois towns. He was born and reared in Franklin County and taught school in the Ozarks before he was a pastor of Methodist churches at dolph warns Jones to leave the community.

A half-witted creature who had been made so by torture at the hands of the Rudolph and Collins gang overhears members of the gang at the mill plotting to get rid of the teacher, and warns him.

The schoolhouse is burned by a member of the gang and an attempt is made to direct suspicion to Jones. It succeeds for a time. Collins strengthens the case against the teacher by telling of seeing Jones leaving the schoolhouse shortly before it was discovered in flames.

Jones and Roxy Nettles, walking near the mill in the evening, see two men coming down the road to the ford. They recognize the two as Rudolph and Collins. The men cross the stream on the stepping stones and enter the mill. Other men approach and entered. Jones creeps under the mill and listens. The men were planning to rob the Spring Bluff Postoffice the next night.

Under the leadership of John Whiteside, a young giant of the hills, the plans of the robbers were frustrated.

All the incidents of the story are placed in the western part of Franklin County. Spring Creek mill still stands on the bank of that stream. The schoolhouse is there and the log homes of the Nettles, Whitesides and others. The Spring Bluff store and postoffice is familiar to all residents of Franklin County.

The original of Ray Jones, the school teacher, lives in St. Clair, about 15 miles from the Spring Creek community. Roxy Nettles is also a character from life.

Not only Rudolph and Collins but the other members of the gang who attempted to rob the Spring Bluff Postoffice were men who really took part in that enterprise. Two of them served terms in the penitentiary for it. Another member of the gang was hanged not long ago for the murder of a man at St. Charles, Mo. Some members of the gang were captured near Pilot Knob, Mo., after a desperate fight. Benton Booth of Maplewood was one of the deputies who assisted in the capture and was wounded in the fight. (Jennings & Graham.)

MY BOY AND I.

SOME excellent advice as to the rearing of boys is given by Christine Terhune Herrick in "My Boy and I." In an easy style the author proceeds to tell parents how to rear boys to useful manhood and to worthy citizenship.

She insists that education must begin early. She agrees with Spencer that the time to start the training of the child is from the cradle.

It is a welcome book indeed since there is a general awakening to the idea that children must be carefully trained if we are to have good men and women. The author emphasizes the necessity of teaching by example and of recognizing and respecting the rights of the child. She goes on the theory that like begets like and that a discourteout parent cannot expect to have children who are models of courtesy. While some of the ideas the author expounds may sound "old-fashioned" it would be well to hark back in some things so that we may get some of the old-fashioned and sturdy manhood and womanhood. (Dana Estes).

A USEFUL PLAN.

ANNIE L. BIGGS, of the Social Center Movement, outlines a plan somewhat along the lines of the new vocational guidance idea, in a little book "Bedrock, Education and Employment the Foundation of the Republic."

According to this plan all human activities are to be studied carefully so that young folk may be properly guided into the walks of life which would fit them best. Everything is to be done to furnish education to all and then suitable employment, since these two are regarded by the author as the foundation of civilization and progress.

The idea is in line with efforts of modern educators and social workers and is worth studying. (Social Center Pub. Co.)

THE RED COLONEL.

GRIMES and mystery fairly tumble over each other in George Edgar's story, "The Red Colonel." Not content with the crimes of the day of which he writes, he goes through the file of the London Times to bring to attention the bold and brilliant coups of "The Red Four" during their days of activity and profit.

This story is the end of the celebrated gang and its crimes chiefly are their preying on each other. A young girl is the central figure in this story, and her fiance is drawn into it. They, with the aid of a shrewd newspaper reporter, solve the mystery of herself and the livid sign of "The Red Four." (Appleton.)

LOVE IN THE SOUTH SEAS.

IF you were shipwrecked on a tropical island, with an extra wardrobe consisting of a full dress suit, half a dozen starched shirts, an opera hat, a bottle of absinthe, half a dozen French novels, a thousand cigarettes, a pipe and plenty of tobacco—but no matches—utterly alone, would you recall the forgotten terrors of a child in a long dark passage, or would you remember the story of a white man being taken by savages for a God, and made king of the tribe?

If you had an income of $10,000 a year, had been raised in luxury and found yourself marooned, clad in a tattered white duck suit, a limp shirt, rubber-soled shoes and carried a watch—which had stopped—would you plunge into the wilds in search of companions, or would you fly a distress signal?

Then if you met a pretty young woman on that island, having the temperament and charm of civilization, accompanied by her father, a marquis, surrounded by wild luxury, and fell in love with her, would you feel like going back to your native land without her, or would you want to give up the world and live on that island of love?

These are the interesting conditions handled by Dion C. Calthrop in his newest novel, "Susette." The tale is carried rapidly along with a distinct charm, with just enough daring to hold the interest of the reader to the end of the unusual romance. (Stokes.)

"THORLEY WEIR."

IT is the villain that makes "Thorley Weir," E. F. Benson's latest novel, "go." Being the villain, Arthur Craddock cannot at the same time be the hero, but it is he that stands out from the other persons we meet in the story quite as conspicuously as the hero in the usual novel. He is an amateur critic and middleman in London art circles and he thrives by buying old masters from run-down British aristocrats and selling them at immense profits to rich Americans. He is also highly successful at discovering budding genius and getting it to flower for him. Charles Latham and Frank Armstrong are, respectively, a struggling artist and a poor playwright when Craddock happens on them. He sees they have the stuff in them and he arranges to develop them, first tying them up with contracts that will insure the major portion of their profits for himself. Both succeed under his exploitation and then they realize for the first time how greedy he has been in binding them to work for him. The reader is perfectly willing to admit that Craddock's conduct in his relation with the two artists is far from being above reproach, but the fact remains that if he hadn't taken them up they would have been a long time "arriving," and might never have done so at all. So they don't get quite so much sympathy as the author thought they would command. On the other hand, Craddock's shrewdness and perspicacity challenge our Yankee admiration, though our gorge rises at his greed.

The love motive comes through his effort to win a young woman who, however, weds Latham, the artist. The novel takes its name from the community where most of its action is laid. (Lippincott.)

CHRISTOPHER POE.

A DETECTIVE of wonderful genius is created by Robert Carlton Brown in "The Remarkable Adventures of Christopher Poe." The possible objection to this banker who turns criminal catcher is that he knows too much. If he made occasional mistakes, or once in a while found something that he did not understand, he would seem more human.

The volume is a collection of short stories, related only in that Mr. Poe and his assistant solves all of the mysteries presented. In one of these stories the banks complain of numerous lightweight gold coins. When this news reaches Poe, he inquires from which part of the city they were deposited, and on learning, without further ado decides that a wholesale vegetable market at which grocers in this vicinity buy their green goods is the scene of the sweating. One morning's work proves he is right. But despite this wonderful knowledge he has some lifely adventures, such as are sought in detective stories. (Browne.)

SHORT STORY WRITING.

IT is a big task in a little book that Modeste Hannis Jordan undertakes in "The Art of Short Story Writing Simplified." She quotes Emile Zola in her foreword as follows:

"The worst of all evils, for a beginner, is to arrive and succeed too soon. He ought to know that behind every solid reputation there lie at least 10 years of labor and effort."

This is a broad statement and one not calculated to encourage the writer, who has, say, only a paltry 10 years of experience with his pen. It recalls the advice of Gibbon to forego writing until the author has reached the age of 50 years.

It would have puzzled Poe, doubtless, to know just where he stood in the world of letters, had he read these bits of wisdom. Poor Poe died at the age of 40, and yet those who have been accredited with great judgment in these matters have agreed that his was a master hand when it came to writing short tales. However, Poe may have been the inevitable exception.

Aside from the possible discouragement indicated in the foregoing, the amateur writer may find good counsel in the pages of Mrs. Jordan's brochure. Some of her suggestions follow:

Get an inspiration and act on it.

Arrange your plot.

Develop the plot plausibly and keep action in its every phase.

Start the story with something that engages the reader's interest at the outset.

Preserve the unity of the plot. Have no subplots.

Preserve the unity of time and place.

Make the characters consistent. Don't say your hero is a strong man and then permit him to act like a cad.

Know when you have finished your story and then stop.

There are some warnings as to titles that are interesting. It is conceded that a difficult part of story-writing is to properly name the story. Mrs. Jordan advises for a short story a title that contains a suggestion of the nature of the tale. She doesn't care for "Stella's Mistake," "His Resolution" and "Too Late." She prefers "The Black Cat," "The Gold Bug" or "A Kitchen Colonel." (Hannis Jordan Co.)

LOVE AND LIBERATION.

JOHN HALL WHEELOCK has collected a number of his poems in a volume which he calls "Love and Liberation." There are very many delightful lyrics in the book. The author is one of the American poets whose work has been honored by being used in "The Lyric Year." Many of the poems in the book have been read and enjoyed as they appeared in periodicals. To give an idea of the author's work, a poem is quoted below:

"There is only one hell
Below, one heaven above,
One for those you hate,
One for those you love.

O love, what must I do
To gain the heavenward way?
I will kiss upon your lips
A thousand prayers a day.

Do penance at them daily
For kisses left undone,
And daily in your arms
Renounce all gods but one."
(Sherman, French Co.)

BEE AND BUTTERFLY.

TWO girls, one a homely industrious "bee," the other a beautiful "butterfly," are the characters in Lucy Foster Madison's newest book, "Bee and Butterfly." There is much in this story to suggest that it tells of personal experience, or at least observation, especially when it is remembered that Mrs. Madison attended the Louisiana (Mo.) high school, the scene of this story. Of course, the bee girl wins eventually, but she has a very hard, self-sacrificing time of it.

The fact that she was a half orphan and lived in the home of the "butterfly," her cousin, and the well-meaning aunt tried all of her theories of the niece first, did not add to her joy. But even the "bee" had her faults and some of them are funny, others are pathetic, in results. (Donohue.)

MRS. RED PEPPER.

MRS. RED PEPPER, as persons who have read Grace S. Richmond's "Red Pepper Burns" will quickly and correctly surmise, is the wife of Dr. Redfield Pepper Burns, the impetuous and brilliant young doctor with a disposition like his name, who played the title role in the other Richmond book and acquired a Mrs. Red Pepper in a manner that was entirely pleasing to the readers of that pleasing story.

Red Pepper is just as red and just as peppery in the present story as in the other. He might be more so if the author would turn him loose as the early pages seem to promise that he will be turned loose. For, in addition to his impetuosity and his brilliancy, he is a good deal of a Turk, as he says himself, when it comes to Mrs. Red Pepper, and betrays a streak of fierce jealousy that gives promise of creating a tense situation as the story develops. But the author sees fit to hold Red in and give Mrs. Red a chance to show what an altogether lovable person the discerning wife of an impetuous red-head can make herself.

The author feels called upon, probably in the belief that she is overworking the Red Peppers, to weave in a new love story, the parties to which are friends of the Peppers.

It is not a half-bad love story because the interpolated lovers do not take as strong a hold upon the reader as Mr and Mrs. Red. The story slows down when the Peppers are switched off. The author would have done better to follow the obvious line of development and give Red Pepper's Turkish jealousy a chance to flare for a while.

He could have been depended upon to supply plenty of tenseness on very slight provocation and yet to have made very suitable amends, in the interest of the "happy ending" when he learned that his jealousy was all unfounded and his rage unnecessary. It's a very good story, though, as it is. (Doubleday-Page.)

"THE BOY EDITOR."

A SORT of juvenile "Queed" is this story by Winifred Kirkland. It tells of a boy who dreamed about future achievements as an editor, while he failed to see the work he might do in the editorship of his school paper. Like Queed, he was awakened by an energetic girl, whose message to him was "You're an editor now!" (Houghton-Mifflin.)

AUBURN AND FRECKLES.

THE average man will be surprised to find how many of his boyhood dreams are contained in the small volume, "Auburn and Freckles," by Marie L. Marsh. It is a quaint telling, from a feminine standpoint, of the varied adventures, joys and griefs of a healthy, hopeful, active boy. Briggs, the cartoonist, has added some drawings. (Browne & Co.)

"DAVE'S DAUGHTER."

A BRIGHT, entertaining story is "Dave's Daughter," by Patience Bevier Cole. "Dave" was one of those men who became so rich mining copper that all of his relatives got a changed view of life. After he was killed trying to rescue some of his miners, one of the relatives took his billionaire daughter east and tried to spoil her and marry her into society.

Perhaps the plan would have succeeded had it not been for two quaint spinster twins who chanced upon a newspaper item about the elaborate wedding plans and wrote to the girl and eventually rescued her from her perilous position. The story is light but entertaining and grave and gay. (Stokes.)

Torturing Twinges

Much so-called rheumatism is caused by weakened kidneys.

When the kidneys fail to clear the blood of uric acid, the acid forms into crystals like bits of broken glass in the muscles, joints and nerve casings.

Torturing pains dart through the affected part whenever it is moved.

By curing the kidneys, Doan's Kidney Pills have eased thousands of rheumatic cases, lumbago, sciatica, gravel, neuralgia and kindred disorders.

Here's a St. Louis case:

Leper's Nurse Is Driven Almost Insane by the Later Ostracism

Greeted Everywhere by "Unclean"

Marie Colliers Tells How She Was Shunned Everywhere She Went.

Marie Colliers has written for the newspapers the following account of her social position and mental sufferings since she returned from the Leper Camp in order to make clear the position in which her work has placed her.

By MARIE COLLIERS,
Former Nurse in Leper Colony on the St. Lawrence River.

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—"Unclean! Unclean!"

The cry that for centuries made a barrier between lepers and the rest of the world, the warning note that made the clean turn from the afflicted, still militates against me in this twentieth century here in Chicago.

Only today I heard the girls in the office where I am employed saying: "It's a shame we have to work with her." And they cast sidelong glances of aversion in my direction as they talked in low tones. I am trying to find other work where I won't be in their way. I wish I could go to another city where I am not known and start life anew.

It is only hope for a realization of that desire that turned me aside a few days ago after I had made up my mind to kill myself. I went to Milwaukee and had a long talk with an old girl chum and she put her arms around my neck and laughed when I told her I was tired fighting an unequal battle against the world.

She is Miss A. Benjamin, 597 Cass street, Milwaukee, but to me she is "Bennie," and she had made me promise one time before when I was disappointed that I would come to her if I ever determined to kill myself. I had decided to do that last week after they told me that I would have to take a rest and not work so hard. I could not afford to do that, and it was the last drop in life's cup that had been tinctured with bitterness because people shunned me when they learned that I had spent four months nursing the poor stricken lepers in the Tracadie colony in Canada.

I went there to become a nun in the Sisters of St. Joseph, a little order of martyrs who minister to the Government's only colony of lepers. I was only there four months when my health broke down on account of the climate and I had to come back to Chicago.

It was one of three girl friends I trusted who met me when I came back last December, and who spread the story that I had been at a leper colony. People drew away from me when I came near. Someone telephoned the boarding house where I was staying and I was warned to move.

"Leper," was whispered in the halls by other women in the house. They drew their skirts away when I passed. I moved away, and the warning word followed me. Eight times in one week I was forced to move.

Since then I have been driven nearly crazy with persecution and manifestations of aversion which are in evidence wherever I go. And that is in spite of a clean "bill of health" that has been issued to me by Dr. George B. Young, the City Health Commissioner. I have a letter from him inclosing a document signed by Drs. Oliver Ormsby, W. A. Pusey, Joseph Zeisler, W. J. M. Cunningham and Murray Rawlings, certifying that they have made an examination, and that there is no trace of leprosy in me.

And yet wherever I turn it is as if I can still hear the centuries old challenge and warning, "Unclean! Unclean!"

"Buck's" Stoves and Ranges are peacemakers in thousands of homes.

PIG OVERTURNS AUTO, ONE MAN IS KILLED

Three Other Illinoisans Hurt When Machine Hits Animal, Crossing the Road.

AURORA, Ill., Oct. 25.—A pig caused M. D. Keily of Sycamore, Ill., to break his neck early today in an automobile accident near Sycamore in which Charles Johnson of Cortland, Ill., owner of the machine, and H. H. Gilmore of Sycamore were internally injured and M. Raylia, also of Sycamore, was bruised.

The automobile in which the four men were riding was going rapidly when it struck a pig running across the road. The machine turned turtle and its occupants were thrown out.

Kelly was killed instantly. Johnson and Gilmore, who were taken to a hospital in Sycamore, are expected to recover.

SAXON PRINCESS CUT OFF

Author of Operetta Loses $8000 Annual Allowance.

VIENNA, Oct. 25.—The Neues Wiener Tageblatt hears from court circles that the Saxon Government has determined from the beginning of next year to withhold the annual allowance, $8000, from ex-Crown Princess Louise.

Doubtless the production of the operetta "The Bizarre Princess," is the reason for this decision.

Sues for Piper's Insurance.

Suit to collect $48,000 insurance under four policies held by the late Edmund J. Piper, president of the Bollman Bros. Piano Co., was filed Friday by A. L. Abbott, trustee in bankruptcy for the company, against Mrs. Mattie Piper and the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co. The company is willing to pay whenever the referee in bankruptcy decides to whom the money should be paid.

AUTO BANDIT DIES BEFORE TEN YEARS SENTENCE IS BEGUN

James Lynch Convicted of Robbing Saloon Man of $3000 Succumbs to Tuberculosis.

James Lynch, under sentence of 10 years for highway robbery as one of four men who took a grip containing $3000 from M. J. O'Meara, near the latter's saloon at Twenty-first and Randolph street, Oct. 10, 1912, is dead of tuberculosis at his widow's home, 1931 Lucas avenue.

Lynch's attorneys had appealed the case to the Supreme Court and he spent his last days at home under bond. He had been afflicted with tuberculosis for years. Ray Stevenson, under sentence of seven years for the same offense, testified that Lynch claimed all but $100 of the O'Meara loot after the robbery on the ground that his days were numbered.

Lynch and Stevenson were not prosecuted by Circuit Attorney Seebert G. Jones because of alleged defects in the evidence, but when Judge Thomas B. Harvey was elected Circuit Attorney he issued warrants and obtained convictions.

The State never has been able to locate the stolen money, despite rumors that Otto Stifel, a brewer to whom the money belonged, had been told by go-betweens that the greater part of the fund would be turned over to him if prosecution would be abandoned.

Stevenson owned and drove an automobile which he said was used by the three who helped him in the robbery. He denied that he accepted $100 he alleged Lynch tendered him. Lynch was 29 years old and a bartender. He died at 8 p. m. Thursday, and John M. Shea, head of the Bertillon Department, identified the body in a casket at the Lucas avenue house Friday.

CATCHES CAR PICKPOCKET

Switchman Chases Man Who Takes His Watch.

J. R. Duley, a switchman, jumped from a rapidly moving Broadway street car at Chestnut street at 11:30 Friday night, when he felt his watch and chain departing, and gave chase to Benjamin Gilbraith, 1857 South Tenth street, until the latter ran into the arms of Patrolman Bonk and was arrested.

The watch and chain were found on the courthouse lawn. Gilbraith denied having taken the watch. Duley lives at 110 Nagel avenue.

WHY 7000 DRUGGISTS

Guarantee and Recommend Vinol.

If anyone should know the value of a medicine it is the retail druggist who sells it.

Therefore, when over seven thousand of the best retail druggists in the country recommend Vinol our delicious cod liver and iron tonic, without oil, as the greatest tonic reconstructor and strength creator they have ever sold, it must indicate the value of Vinol.

We could publish columns of such testimony as the following:

J. C. Brady, druggist of Fall River, Mass., says: "In cases where cod liver oil, emulsions and other tonics fail, Vinol will heal, strengthen and cure."

C. A. Potterfield, druggist, of Charleston, W. Va., says: "It is a pleasure to sell Vinol, as it gives such universal satisfaction."

Hunter & McGee, druggists, of Jackson, Miss., say: "We have great confidence in the strength-creating and curative value of Vinol."

We ask every run-down, nervous, debilitated, aged or weak person or any person suffering from chronic coughs, colds or bronchitis, to try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that their money will be returned if it does not do all we claim.

DELEGATES DON'T FAVOR CUT-OUT MUFFLER BILL

Committee Reports Against Measure and House Passes Park Buying Ordinance.

The Legislation Committee of the House of Delegates recommended Friday night the defeat of the Council bill to muffle the cut-out and bar the condensed-ray lamps of automobiles.

The same committee recommended the defeat of a House bill to split the Parole Board into two bodies, one to preside at the Municipal Police Court on Clark avenue, and the other to have jurisdiction at the Dayton Street Court.

The House voted to submit a charter amendment authorizing the purchase and improvement of parks at the expense of benefitted districts, payments to be made in installments. The City Plan Commission introduced this bill, which has passed the Council, and will be signed by Mayor Kiel. The charter amendment will be voted on at the next special or regular election.

Bollman's

The above is the name of a concern which was this city's leading Piano Store for a period of nearly a quarter of a century.

Bollman Bros. Co. was known the country over as dealing in and having exclusive control of more fine makes of instruments than any other St. Louis piano house. When we purchased

The Entire Bollman Bros.' Stock of

Pianos and Player-Pianos

At Trustee's Bankrupt Auction Sale

these high-grade instruments came to us at prices so small as to break all records.

There were over four hundred of these Pianos!

The makes at the time the sale began included:

Steinway Grand Pianos, Huntington Pianos, Sohmer Grand Pianos, Sterling Pianos, Packard Pianos, R. S. Howard Grand Pianos, Knabe Angelus Players, Lindeman Grand Pianos, Angelus Player-Pianos, Huntington Player-Pianos, Sterling Player-Pianos.

Many of these Pianos of world-renowned reputation are still in our stocks.

Remember, above all things, that there were over 400 Pianos in this wonderful purchase, and that the sale is practically only beginning.

The opportunity to secure a Piano at a small price is yours, but we urge you to act quickly, and have the benefit of the large selection.

Here's only a partial list—a very few of the Piano bargains which await you:

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Old Cemetery for Playground.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

In your paper of last Friday the Park Commissioner suggested a play-ground as a more appropriate monument to the memory of our esteemed citizen, Adolphus Busch. I heartily concur in the opinion of the Commissioner and desire to call your attention to the execellent site for such a park. The Old Picker Cemetery, long abandoned, would make a wonderful playground. It has trees, which would take centuries to grow. The natural lay of the land is such that it could easily be converted to suit the requirement. Compton avenue and Arsenal street is within easy access of five street car lines.

I believe a playground is a more fitting monument than a statue could ever be.

FRANK B. NUDERSCHER.

Don't Give Away Franchises.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

In your issue of the 20th Mr. Houseman has an article explaining how he will build a subway if the city of St. Louis will grant him a franchise worth $17,000,000 upon which to issue $17,000,000 certificates of stock and for a basis on this stock to issue $17,000,000 bonds.

This is brazen effrontery. Why should the people of St. Louis give Mr. Houseman anything? We need a subway under Washington avenue from Eads bridge to the city limits, run with electric trains to relieve the congestion on that thoroughfare. If the city will give me the $17,000,000 desired by Mr. Houseman I will build a subway myself.

GEORGE W. HARRIS.

Name a School for Mr. Busch.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I noticed in one of yesterday morning's papers a letter signed by Mr. F. P. Preissle in which he refers to naming the new high school which is being built in South St. Louis the "Adolphus Busch High School." He says in part "The genius of Mr. Busch was always one of the greatest forces for the good of St. Louis, his death is sincerely regretted by thousands of St. Louisans who knew and lauded him and I can conceive of no more appropriate way in which to permanently honor his memory." I think the writer's suggestion a very good one, and I would like to see the Post-Dispatch take it up, as I sincerely believe that thousands of St. Louisans would heartily favor such a tribute to the memory of Mr. Busch.

READER.

O'Fallon Park for Zoo Location.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

In letter from "Old Reader" in your issue of Oct. 13, reference is made to Mr. Hagenbeck's preference of Forest Park for the proposed St. Louis Zoo. Did Mr. Hagenbeck visit other St. Louis parks? If so, upon what grounds can he venture the assertion referred to in an article on same subject in another city paper he advises the digging of ravines for accommodation of animals as the best method of keeping them. Now if Mr Hagenbeck or Old Reader visited O'Fallon Park they must have seen for themselves that the very ravines proposed can be found in abundance, wide and deep enough, already supplied by nature while the surrounding beauty of these places cannot be surpassed by Forest or any other park in St. Louis, Chicago or New York. Regarding facilities for reaching O'Fallon Park they could not be improved upon. The Broadway cars go direct to O'Fallon Park both from Baden on the north and Carondelet south, as do the Bellefontaine line also. The Sarah and Taylor avenue also direct from the west, with a transfer system from the Union line. It is the best location for our zoo.

NORTH ST. LOUIS BUSINESS MAN.

Use for Zoo Ditches.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Would it not be a good idea to fill those ditches that are to confine the lions and other animals in the zoo with water, stock them with fish and while viewing the animals one can bait his hook and proceed to reduce the high cost of living.

Another thing. Why not make those ditches wide enough so that boats can be used? You can then have the novelty of viewing wild animal life from a boat, the rowing of which will give as good exercise as any golf course.

We cannot have too many attractions, and these suggestions are respectfully submitted to the Zoological Society.

"O. YOUZOO."

To Secure Good Public Service.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I was glad to learn through an item in your editorial column that night schools for training men for municipal service have been established in Detroit. This is a most important and praiseworthy step and every city should follow suit. In addition (as I have suggested in a former letter) the pupils in both day and night schools should be taught that betrayal of a public trust, in any position, is a worse crime than burglary or highway robbery. It should also be thundered from the pulpits and laws should be made to conform and enforced strictly—eliminating favoritism, commutation and parole.

JOSEPH O'GRADY.

DEMAGOGUES AND EXPLOITERS.

Discussing the timidity of capital to seek American investment and the feeling of uneasiness in America, Judge Gary said in a speech to Steel Institute:

> "I venture the assertion that it is largely because of such unnecessary agitation and ill-considered criticism by those who have not the nation's best interests at heart. There is too much demagogue, too much mud slinging.

Granting that there may have been over-agitation and mistakes in the attempt to curb business abuses and monopoly practices, what was the cause of the agitation—the abuses of Big Business and monopoly or the so-called demagogues who demanded their reform?

Where has there been any destruction of legitimate business enterprise? Has not the Government been exceedingly lenient with corporations and their managers who have actually violated law?

Is not the timidity of capital due, not to demagogical agitation but to illegitimate business methods which have put Big Business upon such an abnormal basis that the market value of its securities is endangered by any agitation or exposure and by any effort to enforce honest and just methods?

When men like Judge Gary who control vast trusts organize their business on an honest basis of value and cease their monopoly practices they need not fear either agitation or law enforcement. Nor will business lack capital.

The trust exploiter is a greater foe to business stability and prosperity than the demagogue. Both need curbing.

MINIMUM CONSUMPTION.

Missouri's visible supply of unmined coal is computed at 39,854,000,000 tons. It is figured that at the rate at which it is at present mined and consumed, it will last 9200 more years.

It would last a good deal longer than that if everybody was as sparing of it as Capt. Robert McCulloch is in the street car stoves.

FAILURE AT KOCH HOSPITAL.

Inspection by Dr. F. M. Pattenger of California, an authority on tuberculosis, showed that St. Louis' Koch Hospital is filled with patients in the last stages of the disease and, accordingly, beyond hope of benefit. He also says the open-air treatment, in severe weather, is handicapped by the institution's lack of spacious, covered porches.

To provide during their last days for the comfort of the tubercular poor, whose condition is hopeless, is in itself a fine philanthropy. That, however, is not the special aim of the new tuberculosis movement. If all the accommodations at the Koch Hospital are occupied by such patients, what can it be doing for those in the early stages of the disease and still curable? It is a distressing condition which compels a person who may still receive benefit from the treatment to wait until death creates a vacant cot, by which time he, too, may have passed the possibility of recovery.

Who is to blame for this condition? St. Louis has given much effort to warfare by the new method on tuberculosis. That the only public institution dedicated to utilization of those methods is not fulfilling the purpose for which it exists is most disappointing. It should justify its continuance by a percentage of cures, furnishing an object lesson of the efficiency of the open-air treatment.

When the supporters of the central bank plan devised by a Wall street banker have settled with the President, they will still have to reckon with the people.

THE DIAZ OBJECT LESSON.

"I have guaranteed and continue to guarantee to all candidates that the election will be held with the strictest impartiality for all," says Huerta. "The elections will be of the fairest kind."

It will not be necessary to test the sincerity of this statement by inquiry into voting details in small, obscure towns tomorrow and states remote from the capital. The embarrassments to which Felix Diaz is subjected provides in Mexico's principal sea port an object lesson of the most public kind on Huerta's notion of impartiality.

The Diaz arrival was most opportune. The quality of Huerta guarantees is shown the world more illuminatingly than it would be possible to show it by evidence adduced after voting.

While so many of the living are being drafted to the purposes of vaudeville, the plan to take the bones of Columbus from Santo Domingo to the Panama Exposition at San Francisco will be regarded with deep suspicion until the world learns more details.

CITY'S BILLBOARD VICTORY.

Defeated in every other court, the billboard owners have abandoned their appeal, which has been pending for two years in the United States Supreme Court. Their resistance to billboard regulation has lasted since 1905, rivaling the mill tax litigation in obstruction of a city ordinance.

Confirmed in a power of regulation which has been conceded long ago in almost every other large city, St. Louis should now, of course, take measures for a rigid and impartial enforcement of the provisions so long held up.

The correct motto for Europe right now is "Hands off."

CHILD-SAVING INFORMATION.

At last we know how to save the children from becoming victims of that dread, mysterious disease, infantile paralysis. A St. Louis doctor is credited with making the discovery certain. And a two-page article in next Sunday's Post-Dispatch Magazine not only makes it clear how the discovery was made, but gives such an insight of the causes of the disease that parents everywhere can take precautions that should wipe out this plague.

From time to time the Post-Dispatch has published articles on the apparent connection of what is called limberneck among chickens and the outbreak of infantile paralysis. For a while it was thought that the chickens became infected from the sick child. This was hardly likely, practically all germ diseases being filth diseases, and fowls being notoriously omniverous eaters. Infantile paralysis has been found to be one of the "earth diseases," the other two being tetanus and rabies. Like malaria and the bubonic plague, infantile paralysis is carried from the lower orders to human beings by an insect. With malaria it is a mosquito. With plague it is a flea, and with infantile paralysis a certain fly, fortunately not as common as the house-fly.

The article in Sunday's Post-Dispatch describes and pictures this fly. The next thing is to exterminate it.

STILL VALID.

With President Wilson asserting the Monroe Doctrine from Washington and ex-President Roosevelt proclaiming it in Brazil, European statesmen who have in late years formed a habit of scoffing at it "under the rose" will perhaps take a second thought.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP IN MISSOURI.

The State Public Service Commission is now engaged on a survey of utilities supplying water and illuminants. Of the 312 utilities of this sort in Missouri, 109 are under public ownership and operation. Forty-five of these 109 supply water alone, 29 supply both water and electricity and one supplies water and gas. Thirty-two supply electricity alone, one supplies electricity and gas and one supplies gas alone.

Thus these 109 municipally owned utilities operate 75 plants supplying water, 62 plants supplying electricity and three plants supplying gas—140 plants in all. Public control of water plants is generally accepted as the most practical means of obtaining a water supply of requisite adequacy and purity, but probably the fact that 62 electrical plants are also publicly owned will be news to many.

The figures show that municipal ownership is well advanced in Missouri, so far as utilities operating with a maximum of machinery and a minimum of labor are concerned. The question for the future is how far this policy shall be adopted for ending abuses on the part of other utilities almost as intolerable as the exorbitant charges and corrupt practices of lighting companies and the greed which leads private water companies to subordinate health and fire protection to dividends.

The survey will illustrate the advantage of a utility board with a state-wide rather than a local jurisdiction. Facts as to the costs of publicly managed utilities will be of value in regulating the privately owned utilities. The towns of less success with municipal ownership can learn lessons from the towns of greater success. Both can find instruction in comparisons.

Surely Senator Reed does not envy the fame of the late Senator Gorman?

SHAPING THE CHARTER.

St. Louis' Freeholders, drafting a new city charter, have informally decided, 9 to 4, in favor of a single-chamber City Council. If it can be done legally, nominations may be made by districts. In any event, the plan submitted to the people seems certain to call for election of members of the single house by the city at large.

This action foreshadows submission of a charter which will enable the voters to make St. Louis' government one of the most progressive, genuinely democratic and efficient in America.

Men who argue the Charter Commission should submit a reactionary charter in order to get it adopted by the voters simply do not know the people. St. Louisans want the best and most modern form of city government. They want power to act concentrated in a workably small body of men at the city hall, and they want to retain control of those men, in emergencies, by means of the initiative, referendum and recall.

ELEMENTS IN MEXICO.

It should be kept in mind that while Mexican leaders want power and plunder, and rival British and American oil companies want concessions, the people of Mexico want the land of their fathers and the privilege of cultivating it in peace.

EXCELLENT ADVICE.

This is the Central Civic Council's advice to the Charter Commission:

1. Provide for initiative, referendum and recall.
2. Limit elective offices to Mayor and members of the Assembly.
3. Provide for a one-chamber Assembly, elected from wards.
4. Create a civil service.
5. Make the city free to own and operate public utilities, as need may arise.
6. Simplify organization of the city's departments.

Missouri's Constitution forbids a city to elect members of a one-chamber Assembly from wards. It may be possible, legally, to nominate them from wards or districts, but they must be elected by the city at large.

Otherwise the Central Civic Council's advice appears to tally with the preferences of a majority of the Charter Commissioners, and is probably not far, if at all, in advance of what a majority of the voters are ready to approve when the matter is submitted to them.

MISSOURI HAS GOOD MEAT.

Pleading against prejudice as to eating horse meat, the San Francisco Chronicle tells its readers that the people of many places, including Missouri, eat horse flesh without a shudder. It seems that application has been made to the California State Board of Health for a permit to operate a factory at Richmond, in that State, for the preparation of horse meat. This seems to indicate that there is a demand, or at least a need, for equine steaks and chops in San Francisco.

However that may be, the Chronicle is misinformed as to the diet of Missourians. They eat no horse meat at home, whatever they may unwittingly do when visiting the Pacific Coast. Missouri is a blue-grass State, and not only raises plenty of fat cattle for its own use, but in a single year manages to export no less than $133,244,420 worth of livestock and nearly $40,000,000 worth of "packing house products," neither of which items includes horse meat.

We shall not pity the Californians if they have to eat horse flesh. People who must eat it extol its flavor and nutritious qualities. But Missourians can as yet do without it.

HOW WE GET ON.

Rip Van Winkle finally stirred and sat up.

"Was the Free Bridge ever completed?" he asked.

"No." It is still to be finished," answered a passerby.

"Were the grade crossings ever eliminated?"

"No."

"Did the straphangers ever get a seat?"

"No."

"Did the city ash hauling last?"

"No."

"Was the charter changed?"

"No."

"Did they ever deepen the river?"

"No."

"Was the smoke nuisance ever abated?"

"No."

"Did the St. Louis teams ever get out of last place?"

"No."

"Was the subway ever built?"

"No."

"Were the wires ever put underground?"

"No."

"Was anything ever done about having a park on the river front?"

"No."

"Did we ever get rid of the arbitrary on coal?"

"No."

"Did anybody ever make the passenger trains going out of Union Station start from the Midway?"

"No."

"Did we ever vote on equal suffrage?"

"No."

"Did Kiel ever keep that promise to get out a weekly report of what he is doing?"

"No."

Rip Van Winkle yawned and straightened his pillow.

"Good night," he said, as he dropped off again.

ANOTHER OVATION.

THE ABUSE OF FRANKNESS.

From the Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

"Frankness" is a great word nowadays; under its shelter almost anything may pass, no matter how offensive. Under the ancient regime, Burke declared, "vice itself lost half its evil by losing all its grossness;" we seek to eliminate the other half by restoring the grossness with interest. But in the effort we are in danger of confusing which ought to be kept apart. We see constantly confounded, for example, things so different as frankness and publicity. Because the early Victorians went to extremes of prudishness in private, we should educate our young by flaunting indecency from the housetop. Because they modestly covered the limbs of a piano in a parlor, we are frankly to uncover the legs of people in the street. Because they objected to mild impropriety on the stage, we are to put the foulest things of the underworld on exhibition in the theater; the more nauseating, the greater the moral lesson.

• • •

That reticence upon vital subjects may be carried too far is obvious; the present crusade for frankness is wholly right, but it is wrongly directed, because it does not discriminate between frankness and publicity. Frankness in public should be for public ends like politics, science and letters. It is well that an author should be free to speak as frankly as his art requires; it is not well that under the plea of frankness a mixed crowd should gather in the theater to learn in that sultry atmosphere things that should be taught in privacy with the utmost quietness, simplicity and delicacy. Failure to make this distinction has resulted in much clotted nonsense. We have been told that the drama of loathsome life has a beneficial effect because it warns the young against immorality. But that is a task which can be done far better, when it is needed, in private.

In short, the frankness needed for literature and art is not at all the frankness needed for a treatise on infectious diseases or for a consultation with the family doctor.

• • •

How the instruction in matters of sex for which there is so insistent a call just now, is best to be managed, is a different question. Generally speaking, it is better undone than done unless it is needed. It is better done individually than collectively; in private than in public; a little at a time at the right moments than in one dose. That there are cases where reticence leads to harm is no doubt true. But the remedy is not to shriek in public what modest people hesitate to speak of at home. If some parents find it difficult to allude to problems of sex, it does not follow that they must send their children to see a bawdy house on the stage. The ancients were frank enough, in all conscience, but at least they had the grace to make initiation a sacred mystery. That mystery, romance, awe have an immense educational value is a lesson that the world must apparently relearn. Luckily some psychologists appreciate the dangers of a too bald and shocking realism in the instruction of youth, and the importance of preserving idealism in the tender years in which character is being molded. But above all, ways of education must be found which sober rather than excite. With all the means for the diffusion of knowledge which modern society has at its disposal, it cannot be pretended that the choice is between ignorance and dependence upon the least efficient and most exciting of mediums like the play and the novel. Morals would get on very well if plays and novels not merely ceased to be frank, but ceased to be. This didactic perversion does harm not only to literature but to morals. It is not well for everybody to be talking about the same thing at the same time; if the subject is one that affects the nerves a temporary hysteria is the inevitable result, and makes clear thinking and sane remedial measures difficult. It is time to rescue literature for its own uses and to begin to draw a line between discreet frankness and emotional publicity. There is a place for reticence as well as for frankness, and their claims do not in the least conflict.

Adrianople is the Turks' ancient capital, the symbol of their original triumph on European soil. It is the burial place of their Sultans and possesses many shrines, hallowed by patriotic and religious association. To have retaken it is what the French would think equal to the retaking of Alsace-Lorraine—a revanche on the Bulgarians, a retaliation, a revenge which is always sweet to the conquered. The Wheel

A CHRONICLE of the strange adventures of John Haynes and his weird vehicle.

5—ROLES REVERSED

IN which John Haynes becomes his enemy and sends himself to prison.

By H. M. EGBERT.

NO swindle on the grand scale was ever so successfully contrived as that of the Nokomis Land Co. The members of this organization had filched his Western property from John Haynes, an Englishman; had torn him from his wife and daughter, crippled him with a treacherously fired bullet, and, while he lay helpless in the hospital, railroaded him into the penitentiary for 14 years, under the name of Pete Timmons, a notorious gang leader.

Then, giving out that Haynes had accepted a million dollars in settlement of his claims, and had gone back to England, they divided their plunder and went their several ways, while the new city of Nokomis, built on the stolen land, sprang into being and brought them ample and continuous incomes in the shape of house rents and sales on the installment basis.

The company was dissolved. There was nothing corporate for Haynes to seek to be avenged upon—when he came out. He could not sue the thousands of innocent property holders who had obtained their titles in good faith. Nor did he plan to do so. He had no confidence in justice; he himself would bring the conspirators to book.

While working in the prison machine shop, he invented a powerful gyroscope which, when attached to any vehicle or to the feet, even, would carry the wearer at an incredible rate of speed along roads or railway lines. With the aid of this, he escaped, located his daughter, sent her to Chicago to await his summons, and then turned all his attention to finding his wife and wreaking vengeance upon his enemies.

THE MAN WHO KNEW.

Haynes knew that, like his daughter, his wife must have been told that he was dead. That was the reason why she had not sought him out. One man alone knew where she could be found; Chauncey E. Robertson, of Benderville, the corrupt lawyer who had betrayed him into the power of the more corrupt judge that had sentenced him while he lay helpless in prison, awaiting what he believed to be the continuation of his trial. Haynes did not know that he had been sentenced until the warders hustled him away in court, without permitting him to make a reply.

In the penitentiary, Haynes had worked out the intricacies of his revenge, and, with that fixed idea of the paranoiac who has been driven insane by wrongs, he determined that to each of his enemies should fall a recompense of the same nature as that injury which he had received from him. Torn between the desire of wrecking vengeance and the need of driving a bargain with Robertson, in return for the information he needed, Haynes hurried to Benderville.

Nobody there had heard of Robertson. Certainly there was no man of such a name in Benderville—a small, straggling city of a few thousand souls among whom no one could conceal himself successfully. On this point, John Haynes satisfied himself after a few days' inquiry.

He thought at first that Robertson might be living there under an alias. But an old city directory knew Robertson and furnished his address—24 Main avenue. There Haynes discovered a boarded, weather-worn house with shuttered windows. It had been closed five years and none of the neighbors had any knowledge as to its owner. Since Benderville was little more than five years old, it seemed reasonable to believe that no one now inhabiting that city knew or had ever known this man whom John Haynes sought.

Haynes was discouraged. Evidently his enemy had resolved to place himself beyond reach of retribution, and, taking his own share in the proceeds of the conspiracy, had fled to another part of the country. That night Haynes forced an entrance into the basement of the house, ascended the uncarpeted stairs, and emerged in the hallway where, striking a match, he lit the candle which he had brought with him and proceeded to make a systematic investigation.

A STRANGE HABITATION

He was surprised to find the house well furnished, even to the grand piano in the living room, there were pictures upon the walls and costly furniture and rich carpets. But the whole place was falling into decay.

Dust covered everything with a thick layer of white, the paper was hanging in mildewed strips from the walls, the plaster cracking, and spider webs festooned each room. Evidently Robertson had bought the house with the intention of making it his permanent home; evidently, too, an after-decision, or some sudden access of panic, or the conviction that Benderville was not sufficiently remote from the scene of his exploits, had driven him to seek other refuge, and in such haste that he had not waited to dispose of his furnishings. Perhaps he had not dared to take the risk of returning.

This evidence of sudden flight was still more obvious to Haynes when he entered the library. A chair was drawn up to the fireplace, in which were the ashes of a log fire; beside it was a table containing copies of old magazines and an ash-tray in which was the stump of a cigar with an inch of ash adhering. Haynes looked at this curiously. Five years seemed none too long to have permitted that accumulation of dust and soot—but would cigar ash, that light, almost impalpable substance, remain so long without crumbling under the pressure of the atmosphere?

He looked around him and then perceived that there were footsteps in the dust that covered the carpet—steps other than his, and finger marks upon the mahogany writing table.

Evidently this house had visitors—not burglars either, for they would have removed at least that ivory statuette upon the mantel, and the gilt clock that had run down—the books, too, that stood in dusty rows beside the window. Was it Robertson himself, perhaps, or some agent of his? If so, what did he come for?

Haynes found the half empty box of cigars in a drawer of the table, lit one, and kindling the charred logs with some scraps of newspaper—not without difficulty, for they were damp with mildew—stretched out his legs to the blaze and fell asleep, pondering.

When he awoke it was daylight. He started up in some confusion at first, not knowing where he was. Then, stretching himself and yawning, he rose to his feet and began to ponder upon the best means of effecting his escape unnoticed.

As he stood before the shuttered window, gazing out through a chink at the deserted street, he heard a sharp click at the gate. A postman had dropped a letter into the box. Haynes hesitated; then, very deliberately, he unbolted the front door, walked down the patch of weed-grown garden, and took the letter.

It was addressed to Chauncey E. Robertson.

Then the man came there secretly, he thought, as he tore it open without compunction. He sat down in the library and read it. It began without address and briefly informed the recipient that he had opened a real estate office at a certain number in a downtown street in Omaha. There was no signature. But this was a clew.

Omaha lies some 350 miles east of Benderville. That evening John Haynes strapped on his gyroscope skates, and running swiftly along the railroad lines through the darkness, halting only to make a detour around the larger stations, he reached Omaha about 2 in the morning and made his way to the address given.

HIS OWN NAME.

It was a small, old building in an old part of the city; it was not guarded and it was very easy to pick the lock of the entrance door with a skeleton key and to enter. Haynes found a little directory printed in black letters upon the wall. He looked for Robertson's name, and to his astonishment, he found:

Haynes, John, real estate....44.

This was amazing. Haynes hastened up to the fourth story of the building, where, in front of him, he saw his name again, painted upon the ground glass panels of a door which again informed him that he was in the real estate business. Two minutes later he was inside a tiny office, furnished with a single desk, on which was not a scrap of paper, and with a large safe of that late pattern which calls itself "the burglar's foe."

The chase was growing interesting. This office, like the house, was evidently a blind; Robertson was an adept at covering his tracks. But why had he selected Haynes' name as an alias?

Evidently the safe would furnish valuable information, possibly embracing this fact. But Haynes examined it with increasing dismay. Nothing short of an electric drill and metal-melting apparatus would force it. It was controlled by a combination word-lock, but what word Robertson alone knew. If Haynes chose to remain until his enemy arrived in the morning he would undoubtedly hold him at his mercy. But Haynes did not intend to murder Robertson; his scheme was far more subtle and besides, he must force him to confess where his wife was to be found.

There was nothing but to acknowledge defeat and go. Yet the man could not tear himself away, but kneeled before the safe and pulled now this way and now that, watching the letters pass across the lock. His fingers moved automatically, for his mind was elsewhere, and he did not know that he was making words in answer to the stimulus of the mental images. Suddenly he became aware, with awe and something almost approaching terror, that the safe door was open.

He looked at the word. It was "Mary." His wife's name—for his thoughts had been of her; and that was the name Robertson had selected! A sudden flush of anger made his lips quiver and his face grew hot; then, swinging back the door, he reached in and drew out a bundle of papers.

They were letters, mostly, and as he read them he learned for the first time the full extent and ramifications of the plot which had been formed and put into execution against him; he understood, too, why Robertson, guilty as he was, dared not destroy this evidence which kept him secure against betrayal by the power that it gave him over his confederates.

When the conspirators, having secured John Haynes within this penitentiary at Nokomis Falls, spread the report that he had accepted one million dollars in settlement of his claim to an estate worth more than ten times that amount, this sum was detached from the total capital and became the spoil of Robertson, the lying lawyer who had betrayed Haynes to his enemies.

Resolved to obviate all possibility of retribution, Robertson had removed to Benderville, where he took up his residence. But his uneasy fears would not leave him. At length, finding that life under his own name was intolerable, he hit upon the scheme of taking the name of his victim. He settled in Omaha as John Haynes, and lived upon the proceeds of the plunder, which brought him a substantial income. The house at Benderville he had not sold, partly because he feared to show himself there, partly because his avarice impelled him to hold on to a property which yearly appreciated in value. He also left a thousand dollars in the bank there, undisturbed.

A MINOR CONSPIRATOR.

Of late, however, he had come to the resolution to cut the last connection with his past, and had employed an agent, who had been a minor member in the conspiracy, to visit the house by stealth and receive communications from him there addressed under his own name. He had rented the real estate office to cover his tracks in Omaha; when the sale was effected it was his plan to withdraw to Europe, there to dwell in security.

But the letters—to which he had clung in order to hold evidence against the rest of the gang in case he needed it—these afforded the reader for the first time a complete understanding of the scheme. Haynes learned to his amazement that no less a person than the Governor of the State was implicated. He had then been a notoriously corrupt Senator; now he was Governor, and Robertson had not allowed the wretched man to forget his past.

One letter, written in despair by Gov. Harding himself, although not signed, implored Robertson's leniency in not insisting upon the vetoing of a certain bill. Another hinted at the place where Mary Haynes was concealed. And, as he read this, Haynes' heart leaped; now he knew that he could discover her abode at any time without the necessity of bargaining with Robertson. On him he could wreak vengeance to the full. And she still lived, thank God!

He would not seek her out until he had accomplished all that he had planned; then he would take her and Eleanor and return to England, leaving Nokomis and his stolen lands behind him. The Governor should reveal her hiding place at the appointed time.

John Haynes placed the Governor's letters in his breast pocket, replacing the remaining papers in the safe, closed it, stole out, and locked the door again. There was now no sign that any midnight visitor had entered the real estate office. At 4 o'clock he stood upon the streets of Omaha. At 6 he was once more in Benderville; and 10 minutes later he was back in Robertson's house.

That morning he took up his residence at the most fashionable hotel, signing his name as Chauncey E. Roberts, upon the register. By nightfall all the town knew that Mr. Robertson had returned to live in the community. Next day the shutters upon the windows of the house were folded back and an army of workmen was placed at work upon its renovation.

As the days passed, Haynes grew secure in the conviction that Robertson was personally unknown to anyone in Benderville. He made secret inquiries and discovered that none of the officials in the local bank had been there more than three years. Everything pointed to the success of his undertaking.

PASSED HIMSELF OFF.

Haynes knew that, sooner or later, Robertson's agent would learn and bring him news concerning this bold usurpation of his principal's name and interests. But for more than two months nothing occurred. This suited the Englishman's plans, for, the longer the period that should elapse before the crisis arrived, the better he would be able to establish his identity in the town.

He did not scruple to state that he had come from Nokomis, or that he had owned shares in the land company. To the full he adopted his enemy's personality, and when two months had passed and the house at last stood ready for his occupancy, he had become universally known as Robertson, and was considered a person of much importance at the local bank, where he had deposited the balance of the $5000 that remained to him from the proceeds of an earlier exploit against one of the conspirators.

All this while Robertson made no move. In fact, it was not until eight weeks had elapsed that his agent, making his periodical visit to Benderville, learned to his amazement that Robertson had returned.

He hurried to the house, walked into the hall through the wide open door and into the dining room, where Haynes was finishing a hearty meal. The Englishman rose and came forward with outstretched hand. He guessed instinctively who his visitor was.

"Good evening, sir," he said. "What can I have the pleasure of doing for you?"

The other looked at him and looked again. The face seemed familiar, and though he could not name the man, his heart sank under a premonition of disaster.

"I want Mr. Robertson," he stammered.

Haynes placed the card case and handed his visitor a card on which was engraved the name of Chauncey E. Robertson. "Evidently this is a case of mistaken identity," he said, smiling.

The other had been staring hard at him all the while. He knew him at last, though it was five years since they had met, when he was a poorly paid clerk in Robertson's law office at Nokomis.

"You're John Haynes," he whispered in terror, and his knees knocked together. He had read of the man's exploits, of his machine, his terrible vengeance. He sank into a chair.

"You haven't any grudge against me, sir?" he whined. "I knew nothing about it at all. Can't we make some arrangements?"

"I really fear you must be under some strange misapprehension, Mr.—Jenkins, isn't it?" said Haynes, the name of the cheap little clerk suddenly returning to him. "Why, Jenkins, although I haven't seen you since you were my law clerk in the Nokomis days, I hardly think this explains the purpose of this unexpected visit. You should have given me warning, Jenkins. Do you not remember that I used to have fainting fits when I argued cases before Judge Charteris?"

THE AGENT'S FEAR.

The wretched agent sank in his chair like a collapsed bladder, staring at Haynes with fishy eyes, listened in terror to this sarcastic outburst.

"By the way, Jenkins," Haynes continued, "I am glad that you have come here after all, for I have been anxious to discover the whereabouts of a certain John Haynes. You remember him, doubtless. You will recall that case of mine, a very important one, in which this man Haynes laid claim to certain lands, the property of the Nokomis Land Company? We went all over the papers together, you will remember, and finally, as his lawyer, I advised Mr. Haynes that he had a case and that he should refuse to settle for less than a million dollars."

The agent rose up tremulously and drew near, fawning and rubbing his hands together.

"I can do anything for you, sir," he whispered. "I know where Mr. Robertson's to be found. You want him, don't you, sir?"

"I have heard," continued Haynes impassively, "that Mr. Haynes has opened a real estate office in Omaha. Probably you have not heard of it yet. Wait!" He rose, went to his desk, and, extracting the letter which he had taken from the letter box two months before, handed it to Jenkins. "Read that!" he said sternly.

THE LETTER.

The agent was edging toward the door. He meant to run, as hard as he could, and never stop until he reached the depot, to take train there for Omaha. He would have been just as willing to conspire with Haynes, but this was unendurable, this mockery which wrung his soul with horror. If it should change to rage! He edged closer—and then Haynes leaped in front of him, shouting with laughter.

"Please wait a moment longer, Mr. Jenkins," he said. "Come into the library. Sit there!" He indicated the chair at the desk and Jenkins sank into it. "Now take that pen and write to Mr. Haynes as I shall dictate. Are you ready? 'Dear Mr. Haynes: I have received your letter. It is necessary to come to Benderville by the first train. I have an immediate offer for the house at a figure which will surprise you, but it must be taken within 48 hours or the deal falls through. All is well. J——'"

When the other had finished Haynes folded and stamped the envelope. "Now, Jenkins," he said, "you spoke of an 'arrangement.' What did you mean by an 'arrangement?'"

Jenkins, as if hypnotized, only stared, open-mouthed, at this terrible man.

"I tell you what arrangement I will make with you, Jenkins," continued Haynes. "You are employed in Nokomis still?"

"In Omaha," muttered the other.

"Correct, and I am glad you did not lie to me. Now, Jenkins, after our pardonable deception of your friend Mr. Haynes you will doubtless find the East more comfortable for you. Am I correct in that supposition? Good. Then"—He opened a spring drawer in the table—"here is $250. Make your way to New York by the first train and stay there till the month is ended. If you go to Omaha," he added, "I'll kill you. Wait! Take this letter and post it on your way to the depot."

COMPELLED BY FEAR.

He watched the man slink down the street toward the letter box, but did not even wait to see him drop the letter. He knew well enough the deadly fear which he had inspired; he knew, also, that Jenkins, terrified by the trap into which he had fallen, had been temporarily reduced to the condition of an automaton; that he would obey his command unquestioningly. Besides, he reflected as he re-entered with a shrug of the shoulders, even if Robertson did not come, his own position was still secure. He liked to leave chance a loophole. It would be only a matter of time before he caught him again.

But Robertson did come. He arrived two evenings later, saw the house brilliantly lighted, and entered in some perplexity. Haynes was waiting for Robertson in the library, and hailed him as he passed by on his way to the reception room, where he imagined Jenkins to be waiting for him.

Robertson turned at the sound and came in quickly, looking in astonishment at the other. The voice seemed somewhat not wholly unfamiliar, but the figure was that of an old, bent man, and the face was nearly concealed under a profuse growth of hair and beard. Even Jenkins would not have recognized Haynes again in that disguise.

"Who the deuce are you, sir?" exclaimed Robertson angrily, as he entered. "I have been under the impression that this is my house, sir. What are you doing here?"

Graybeard rose chuckling and held out his hand.

"Mr. Robertson, I think," he said.

"Well, sir?"

"My name is Patterson. I have purchased this house—or rather have arranged to purchase it, through Mr. Jenkins, your agent. I have $4000 in the Benderville bank to meet the first installment, and you shall have the balance of $34,000 in 24 monthly payments."

"But—but"—stammered Robertson.

"I understood from Mr. Jenkins that if you had not returned from Europe by the time the house was decorated I was to have free residence here pending your arrival. I moved in three days ago."

Robertson had never thought so hard before.

"Tomorrow morning, Mr. Robertson," resumed the other, "we can transfer the title deed, if you are agreed. I understand that it is at the bank now. And then we can sign the agreement."

Robertson's brow cleared; he smiled, and, sitting down, bit off the end of a cigar. Of course! What an ass he had been so nearly to betray himself. He had not hoped to get more than $25,000 at most, and here Jenkins had obtained $3000 more.

THE BANK APPOINTMENT.

"'By all means, Mr. Patterson,' he said pleasantly. 'I hope you will forgive my abruptness. At what hour will it suit you to be at the bank?'

"'How would eleven do?' asked Graybeard. 'I can step into my lawyer's office and have him meet us in the directors' room. That will enable us to wind up the affair in a single session.'

"'That will suit me admirably,' said Robertson. His caution had been completely overcome by avarice. It would be the work of a few minutes only to complete the formalities and then he would arrange to have the monthly installments sent to London and leave America forever. After a few trivial remarks he rose and took his leave cordially.

When he had gone Haynes went to the telephone and called up police headquarters. Afterward he telephoned his banker at his residence.

"Well, gentlemen, here we are," smiled the old man as he welcomed Robertson in the directors' room on the following morning. 'Mr. Robertson,' he continued, 'you see, I believe, almost a stranger here. Allow me to introduce you to Mr. Carpenter, a director of the bank. Mr. Carpenter's assistants,'" he continued, waving his hand comprehensively toward two gentlemen with large, unpolished boots, who sat behind the table rather gloomily. "Mr. Robertson—my lawyer, Mr. Franks. Mr. Franks, have you the title-deed ready?"

THE CHARGE.

Franks placed it upon the table and Robertson read it over carefully. Then taking a pen from Carpenter, he held it over the document.

"Where shall I sign?" he asked.

"'You may sign here,' said Franks. 'But not unless you want to,' he added impressively.

"'Why, of course I want to,' said Robertson genially. 'It isn't often a man refuses to sign for eight and twenty thousand dollars, is it?' He wrote his name in a large, legible hand.

Then Haynes took off his beard and the two men rose from where they were seated and stood one on each side of Robertson.

"Come along," said one of them briskly.

"'I beg your pardon!' said Robertson briskly. Then, as he turned, he found himself looking into the face of Haynes. He knew him at once. He gasped, staggered, fell backward; and the handcuffs were snapped on his wrists.

"'What is the charge?' he muttered as they helped him to the door.

"'Forgery,' replied the lawyer curtly.

Robertson felt the net close round him. How could he deny himself, he who was known to all his friends in Omaha as Haynes? He could not call on anyone in Nokomis to identify him. He had forged his own name for $31,000.

American Girls All Puritan Priscillas, Is the Original Discovery of M. Poiret

Famous Dressmaker, Though He Sticks to "Eyeglass Myth," Furnishes an Alibi Against Critics Who Denounce Dress and Amusements and Manners of Modern Women.

"Her Life, Her Actions, Her Conversation Are Flawless," He Says of the Girl as He Has Found Her From Boston to California.

By Nixola Greeley-Smith.

AMERICAN girls are just a lot of prudes and Priscillas, says M. Paul Poiret, French dressmaker de luxe.

Not in those words, of course. His exact phrase was that the "American girl is a Puritan." M. Poiret says: "It is my opinion on the American girl from California to Boston. Everywhere she represses her emotions. She is never really natural or impulsive. She thinks about the conventions before she speaks or acts. Her life, her actions, her conversation are flawless, well-bred, irreproachable, but they are governed by system and the opinion of the world. She follows the line laid down by her Puritan ancestors, and like them she wears a uniform. Nothing has interested me so much as this uniformity of dress among American women."

Further on in his analysis of American femininity M. Poiret observes that we all wear eyeglasses, a detail which should indicate pretty clearly the depth, justice and truth of his other remarks.

However, the myth that all Americans wear eyeglasses is the most sacred tradition of the foreign critic. In continuing to circulate it, M. Poiret merely runs true to form.

In every other statement he departs refreshingly from the trodden path. Until he came among us the American girl had been called everything on earth—except a Puritan! Surely, with the uniformity and the unanimity M. Poiret has discovered in us we should join hands and say: "We thank thee, Frenchman, for calling us that word."

Because it's a nice word and an awfully good alibi for all those other things men have said we are. From every pulpit and lecture hall thunders denunciation of our dresses and dances, of our lack of decorum and the sweet, old-fashioned, womanly graces. And just as we had come to think that after all we were just a lot of turkey-trotting millstones about the neck of the American man—millstones CAN trot; I've seen them do it—along comes that dear M. Poiret with his reassuring words.

Shades of Priscilla, how wonderful it is that a traveler has observed our manners and morals for a whole month and still finds us puritanical. In what sequestered cloister has M. Poiret spent such time as remained to him when he was not lecturing or giving interviews?

Or has he really looked upon us and found us all the same?

Here we are the melting pot of all nations, to borrow Mr. Zangwill's forceful phrase. The mere fact that the population of our large cities is of such racial variety would prevent the uniformity of type which M. Poiret by some strange obliquity of vision has found among us. We are, as a matter of fact, a nation a la carte. The menu of our American femininity is printed in all languages.

If you like French vivacity and the highly accented charm of the Latin woman you will find it in New York or San Francisco just as well as in Paris. If you use allurement in the lanky freshness of the Englishwoman, or housewifely poise of the German, or if you prefer the many generations of American girl who is the pousse cafe of all feminine charms—a layer of French, another layer of German, layers of English, Irish, Scotch, Jewish, any nation and all nations of the earth in fact, you will discover it here.

So much for the faces of American women. As to figures, they are conceded to be more uniformly excellent here than anywhere else on earth.

Our clothes ARE too much alike. In that particular M. Poiret speaks with authority and justice. I think he was quite right in saying some weeks ago that we need to think less of fashion and more of ourselves. Yet fashion makes more beauties than it mars. For when the average woman undertakes to design her own clothes her thoughts seem to turn inevitably to the Mother Hubbard, and her most frequent notion of acquiring distinction is to discard her corsets.

Save in this matter of the uniformity of our clothes, I fear M. Poiret is wrong. We are not Puritans. What a let of trouble and worry and card-playing and tangoing we might be spared if we had not come such a long way from the Mayflower, and if we really believed, as the Pilgrim Fathers did, that everything worth doing is desperately wrong. Even sin has lost its savor, as any candidly wicked person will tell you, since the good ceased to get so excited about it. The Puritan really served a great purpose in the world, for he added to the number of its prohibitions, consequently to its delights.

But, unfortunately, there are very few of him left in the United States today, and practically none of HER.

We do not deserve M. Poiret's opinion, but let us say "Merci, Monsieur," just the same and be grateful, nevertheless.

TURNED CLOCK TO WALL TO AVOID WATCHING IT.

I worked for a firm where a 98-cent alarm clock informed us all how the day was progressing. It was placed on a shelf where I could not help glancing continually at it. I turned its face to the wall in order not to be distracted from my work. About an hour after I had done this my employer called to me from his desk to ask what time it was. I jumped on a chair to reach for the clock and in my nervousness I dropped it. The crash brought the boss to his feet and he demanded an explanation. I did not then interpret the curious look he gave me as a $1 raise, but I found that out at the end of the week.

LILLIAN LEFFLER.

VALUE OF POLITENESS.

Upon leaving school I secured a position as cashier, and I worked for the interest of the firm, and when the customers would come up to pay, I would greet them with a kind word, which resulted in my first raise. The manager said that treating people with kindness is what most of the time increases business. And after I received my raise I went on with the same system as before, which most of us neglect after we have received higher places.

"JULIUS CAESAR'S MOTTO."

I came to the city without relatives and friends, or even one kind, familiar face to encourage me. Going from street to street and store to store, I looked for work, and everyone seemed to have numerous employes, but at last I entered a small store in the business section of the city. Seeing that I really wanted work, the proprietor gave me small things to do, and they increased until I had a good position at $7 per week. Many evenings, I worked after hours until late in the night to obtain extra money to send to my dear mother at home. Seeing my anxiety to make a man of myself, the proprietor spoke encouragingly to me, and increased my wages to $15 per week.

That was only last year. I am now 22 years of age; six years ago I thought there was no path clear before me, but through perseverance, hard toil and with the zeal of an honest heart, I have succeeded. To the youths of today I give Julius Caesar's motto: "I came, I saw and I conquered!!"

"THE BOSS SAW THEM."

Some time ago worked in a furniture factory, and I attended to my work strictly. Some boys that cared nothing about doing good work tried to get me in some kind of play, but I would not have anything to do with them, so they kept on playing during their work hours.

Finally, one day the boss saw them. One day he called me to his desk and told me that he would give me a raise, so I said nothing about it among my work mates, and as soon as pay day came I found a good raise of salary in my pay envelope.

GEO. E. KEMPER,

ATTENDED TO WORK AND "ASKED THE BOSS."

I got a job in a candy factory. I went to work at 7 o'clock in the morning. I worked steady all day long. I did not look out the windows, stand around or laugh or talk with the other girls, nor did I rush out on the streets at dinner hour. I never stopped 10 or 15 minutes ahead of time to wash, comb and dress myself. I always waited till the foreman or foreladv told me to. I always tried to do my work the very best I could. If I didn't understand it, I always asked the boss. And I asked for a raise and got it.

FRISTOE DEFEATS CARLETON IN GLEN ECHO GOLF MEET

First Round of Club Championship Tourney Also Productive of Other Keen Matches.

FULLERTON BEATS BESCH

Match Is Decided on Nineteenth Green After Uphill Fight by Winner.

Jesse L. Carleton's defeat, 1 down, by J. W. Fristoe, was only one of many surprises in the first round of the Glen Echo Country Club's annual championship golf meet Thursday. Tarleton Brown's elimination at the hands of H. S. Wheeler, who won on the nineteenth green, was really not according to Hoyle, while J. P. Cabanne's conquest over F. A. Walker fooled some of the sharps.

All matches in the first round of the championship class were keenly contested. R. W. Fullerton went 19 holes to get a thin decision on points over Cooney Besch, while T. B. Boyd had an equally trying argument with A. W. Southward. The D. B. Hussey-C. L. Robinson tilt, which eventuated 5 up and 4 for Mr. Hussey, was the only lopsided match of the round.

Nelson Wins From Rumsey.

In the Class A division Horace Rumsey yielded to C. W. Nelson, 3 up and 2, while S. J. Harbaugh handed Harry Vinsonhaler a similar dose in Class B.

The second round matches will be played today, while an effort will be made to have the tournament wind up a week hence. The semi-finals are set for next Thursday. Results and pairings:

Championship Class—J. P. Cabanne defeated F. A. Walker, 2 up and 1; W. C. Ripple defeated Paul Jones by default; T. B. Boyd defeated A. W. Southward, 1 up in 19 holes; D. B. Hussey defeated C. L. Robinson, 5 up and 4; J. W. Fristoe defeated J. L. Carleton, 1 up; F. D. Gardner defeated F. E. Newberry, 1 up; R. W. Fullerton defeated C. G. Besch, 1 up in 19 holes; H. S. Wheeler defeated Tarleton Brown, 1 up 19 holes.

Class A—C. W. Nelson defeated H. S. Rumsey, 3 up and 2; W. L. Michener defeated T. D. Kelley by default; J. Riordan defeated J. B. Hogan 2 up and 1; C. C. Hall defeated F. H. Kaiser, 6 up and 5.

Class B—S. J. Harbaugh defeated Harry Vinsonhaler, 2 up and 1; E. T. Campbell defeated J. C. Barrows, 2 up; J. W. Ferguson defeated S. T. Rand, 2 up; A. H. Hutchings defeated H. E. Halliday by default.

Class C—J. H. Koehler defeated L. D. Woodward, 7 up and 5; L. O. Brandt defeated F. A. Goodrich, 3 up and 1; E. P. Nelson defeated J. W. Ford by default. The S. H. Fullerton—E. P. Byrne match was not played.

Consolation Pairings—F. A. Walker vs. Paul Jones; A. W. Southward vs. C. L. Robinson; J. L. Carleton vs. F. E. Newberry; C. G. Besch vs. Tarleton Brown.

Auto Drivers Look for Records on Fast Track at Maxwelton Tomorrow

St. Louis will again occupy the attention of the automobile world tomorrow afternoon, when the curtain will be rung on the 1913 racing season at the Universal Exposition grounds.

The good weather of the past three days has made the track fast, and with three extra events offered in addition to a full program of postponed races for the day, Sunday's meet should go down in automobile history as one of the most important ever held on a dirt track in this country.

Officials of the meet anticipate a "red-letter" day in gasoline history, so far as world's dirt-track records are concerned, and made the statement Saturday that now the track was put in shape more speed marks would be shattered Sunday than was ever clocked in a one-day meet.

Disbrow is scheduled to go after the world's record time for the mile and two-mile distance, now held by Barney Oldfield, with his famous Simplex "Zip," the same car he sent to eight of the world's speed marks last season. Wild Bill Endicott will shoot at the 25 and 50 mile records with his powerful 120 horsepower Case Special. Several other distances will be announced at the track in case these four records are lowered.

FATHER WILLIAM.

"YOU are old, Father William," the young man said,
"And you write a most horrible fist;
Your quaint hieroglyphics can scarcely be read.
Have you broken a bone in your wrist?"

Said the sage to the youth as he polished his specs;
"I once wrote a pretty fair scribble,
But now that I'm old I write nothing but checks,
So, therefore my son, Isch ca bibble."

"You are old," said the youth, "as I mentioned before,
And your hair has become very white,
Yet you're here with the bleacherites keeping the score.
Do you think at your age it is right?"

"In my youth," said the sage as he shook his gray locks,
"I rooted till all out of breath;
I rooted and rooted in spite of the knocks,
And I'll root till the day of my death."

"You are old," said the youth, "one would hardly suppose
That your nerve was as steady as ever;
Yet the brick that you threw hit the "ump" on the nose.
What makes you so awfully clever?"

"I've answered your questions," replied the old man,
"Till my belfry is buzzing with bats;
So beat it, young fellow, as fast as you can,
Or will give you a kick in the slats."

BULGARIAN BANDITS KILL GRAPPLER MAHMOUT

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—Yussiff Mahmout, a Bulgarian wrestler, who met a number of American mat men, including Frank Gotch, by whom he was defeated, was killed by a band of Bulgarian bandits in the mountains near Billstria, his home, according to a story told by two Turkish wrestlers who arrived here today. Mahmout was petty officer in the Bulgarian army during the late war and, according to their story, went to the town to draw some money to pay off the men in his command.

Sixteen bandits, learning the purpose of his trip, waylaid him on his return, but because Mahmout had procured only orders instead of gold coin they shot and killed him. Mahmout's death occurred three weeks ago.

C. B. C. BACKS IN SPEED TEST TODAY AGAINST NORMALS

Kelly's Men to Demonstrate Scoring Ability on Cape Girardeau Team.

By W. J. O'Connor.

That well exploited C. B. C. backfield, with three wing-footed lightweights, will be given a speed trial this afternoon at Robison Field where the Normals of Cape Girardeau will be entertained with a game of football. Cote Brilliante adherents claim they have the fleetest trio of backs in the city, and if Coach Kelly sees fit to unleash his men today, they predict a record score against the Cape Normals.

The loss of Sid Collins, a finished quarter and field general, may somewhat hamper the work of the collegians, although Murphy has been doing great work in practice. Murphy will show at quarter today, assisted behind the line by Ratican, Shea and Gebhart, all fast and artful dodgers. Quinn and McInnis will be the wing men with the regular line intact.

Last Chance for Victory.

Coach Edmunds realizes that his Pikeway eleven must win today or forfeit its one big chance of the season for victory. With Drake and Missouri following Westminster, prospects do not seem bright for triumphs later in the season.

However, in Westminster the Pikers today meet a worthy foe. This team is every bit as heavy—or should we say light—as Washington, and has been coached well by Lemire, a former Missouri U. star. Lemire today will have Eddie Klein, one of the present Missouri coaches, on his bench as assistant adviser. Besides helping the Blue Jays, Klein can also get a good line on Washington's style of play. Missouri calls here two weeks hence for its annual tilt with the myrtle and maroon forces. All the Washington regulars, with the exception of Kammerer, will break into the lineup today. Play at 3 o'clock.

St. Louis U. is idle this afternoon.

Eastern Soccer Teams Scheduled at Robison Field

True Blues of Paterson, N. J., and Hibs of Philadelphia Get Holiday Dates.

The True Blue soccer team of Paterson, N. J., winner of the American Cup last year, and the Hibernians of Philadelphia, champions of the Pennsylvania League, have been booked by the Robison Field soccer officials for the holiday dates this season. The True Blues will show here Christmas and the subsequent Saturday and Sunday, while the Hibs will come New Year's day and remain for two games the following Saturday and Sunday.

Robison Field soccer officials believe they made a ten-strike in booking these teams. Secretary Will Dooling says they are the best in the East and should properly demonstrate the art of kicking.

Officials of the Athletic Park League have not closed with any Eastern team as yet, although they have opened negotiations with several strong teams. President Winton Barker has generously offered to guarantee all expenses of the visiting teams during the holidays, thereby assuring a competent attraction.

BYRNE WILL PLAY WITH LEOS IN SOCCER GAME

A change has been made in the schedule of soccer games at Athletic Park Sunday. In the opening contest the Columbian A. C. team, reinforced by five new players, will take on the Millers. The St. Leos will tackle the Rock Church eleven in the windup. Bobby Byrne, the Phils' third baseman, will appear in the forward line with the St. Leos.

Princeton-Dartmouth Game Is Gridiron Feature Today

Muddy Fields in East

Slow Going on Tiger Campus May Minimize Orange Eleven's Chances for Victory—Up to Pennsy to Humble Indians or Lose Prestige.

By Herbert Reed,
Former Star of Cornell Eleven.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.

THERE are six high-class football games on the schedule for today—the clashes between Princeton and Dartmouth at Princeton; Pennsylvania and Carlisle at Franklin Field, Philadelphia; Yale and Washington and Jefferson at New Haven; Harvard and Pennsylvania State College at Cambridge; Cornell and Pittsburg at Ithaca, and the Army and Tuffts at West Point.

Because of the intercollegiate relationship and because both coaching systems are versatile, the meeting between the orange and black and the green is the day's premier gridiron event. Each team seems to be confident almost to a dangerous degree, but should the gridiron prove sloppy and the ball slippery as a result of the steady rain that began yesterday forenoon, the natural advantage would lie with the heavy Tiger eleven, although it must be remembered that the heavy going slows up the shift plays that have been the mainstays of the Princeton offense for two years.

Tigers Are Favored.

Prestige and the ability to win games by clever following of the ball make the Tigers a natural favorite, although the first few minutes' struggle between the two lines might result in an advantage for the lighter men from Hanover. Should either eleven "get the jump" in the line, the game might well be one-sided, with a high score. But on a heavy field there would seem to be less chance for wide-open play that both teams would like to have. Princeton took the open play from the beginning Dartmouth was slower to adopt, but both, I think, would ask for nothing better today than a dry field and no favor.

One of the day's real treats should be the meeting between Carlisle and Pennsylvania. Little by little the Quakers have been brought along by George Brooke, and as a result, an eleven that looked to be just the average red and blue team early in the season has begun to show signs of really high-class form. On a rather soggy field neither team will be able to make the most of the open game, and Carlisle's sheer power may be more effective than it otherwise would be. Should the Quakers play up to form and win the game with reasonable comfort, their stock would go soaring.

Good Line on Yale.

After today's game at New Haven, which the Blue should win if it does not show a slowing up in its recent steady progress, the New Haven eleven will be easier to size up. The reappearance of Warren in one of the tackle positions is one of the best signs of the early season, I think, as is also the apparent return to form of Avery, one of the best "big game" ends I have seen. The Washington and Jefferson eleven, conqueror of Pennsylvania State, is one of the huskiest and best coached of the small college teams, and Yale is in for a busy afternoon. The game should prove just such a test as Ellis found in the Army game, a week earlier in the season, in recent years.

One of the most absorbing puzzles of the day will be solved at Soldier's Field, where Pennsylvania State College meets Harvard for the first time.

Up to a week ago Hallenback's team looked quite as formidable as many State college teams of the past, but the defeat at the hands of W. and J. was a severe blow to the Pennsylvanians. Nevertheless, if Cutter is in form and the team does not suffer from stage fright, it would not be surprising to find it hustling the Crimson quite a bit from time to time. Since the defeat of a week ago, Hallenback has been hard at work with the line, and there has been noticeable improvement on the ends.

Cornell in Real Test.

Cornell is in for a hard game with Pittsburg, and much of the success of the Ithacans depends upon their ability to weather this game, probably one of the hardest on the Cornell schedule. It seems to have been all but impossible to get the entire Cornell team up to its top form on one day, something that will have to be done soon if the Carnation and White is go through the rest of the schedule with credit. From now on the Ithacans will have their hands full.

Tufts is coming down to West Point with the best eleven the Massachusetts Institution has had in 20 years, and the Army will have to improve on its showing against Colgate to handle the visitors.

Manager Huggins Arrives to State That Deal With Giants Is Still On

MANAGER HUGGINS of the Cardinals trekked into town Saturday morning and prepared for a long session with Owner Britton, who will assist the tactician in preparing the "tin" for the undesirable athletes infesting these parts.

"I have made no deals as yet, but I expect to do extensive trading at the National League meeting in New York the second Tuesday in December," declared Huggins. "I had a talk with Manager McGraw in Cincinnati the other day, but we did not consummate any swap. However, McGraw's absence from the country will not prevent me from dealing with New York. Secretary J. B. Foster has the authority to make any trade that may please the New York club. I will deal with Foster at the December meeting."

Huggins is on his way to Michigan, where he will spend a short time hunting with Manager Mike Kelley of the Indianapolis club. After their sojourn in the Michigan woods, Huggins and Kelley will return to civilization Nov. 12, at Columbus, O., where they will attend the annual meeting of Minor League clubs.

President Britton and Scout Bob Connery also will attend the Columbus confab. They will assist Huggins in disposing of several recruits, who already have proved themselves unfit for first division duty in the National League.

ONE KNOCK-OUT IN 17 BOUTS IN M. A. C. TOURNEY

Walter Pepper Only Boxer in Army of Amateurs With a Sleep Producer.

By Harry S. Sharpe,
Referee of the M. A. C. and Boxing Authority for the Post-Dispatch.

For three hours and 30 minutes Friday night a crowd that numbered into the hundreds cheered their favorites in the first amateur boxing tournament of the season staged in the Missouri Athletic Club's gymnasium. There were 17 bouts; most of them went the three rounds prescribed by the amateur boxing rules and none of them went the extra session of two minutes provided for when a decision cannot be awarded at the end of the third round.

Only a few of the boxers had tried for medals before, and as a consequence there resulted a variety of styles and poses that brought forth cheers for good work in some of the bouts and convulsed the spectators with laughter in others. Some of the boxers showed the result of intelligent instruction and careful training, while others were trusting to methods that must have been entirely their own.

Rules Well Interpreted.

The judging of Harry Kiener and John Q. Day could hardly be improved upon, as their work showed knowledge of the rules. They agreed throughout the evening's entertainment and it was not necessary in any bout for the referee to cast a deciding vote, excepting in the bouts that failed to go the limit and in which a contestant was disqualified for violation of the rules or was stopped to prevent unnecessary punishment.

Some good boxers can be developed out of the material that answered the call of "Time" last night, but there was not a boxer or a bout that loomed up as a particular feature so far as scientific boxing is concerned, though some of those who participated boxed unusually well for beginners, and particular mention may be made of Johnny Thompson, Ed Harrington, Frank Hopkins and Dick Connell, who boxed in the 125-pound class, Thompson defeating Harrington, while Connell won from Hopkins. The latter will gain more points when he learns to close his glove and does less slapping.

There was lots of hard hitting, and there was plenty of comedy. In the latter class the spectators were much amused by a bout participated in by Paul Quirin and Ralph McCall in the 135-pound class. Neither held much of an edge over the other so far as boxing ability is concerned, but McCall managed to secure a couple of knockdowns in the first round, mainly because Quirin couldn't keep from crossing his feet. Both the boys were doing a lot of wild swinging, but they were usually doing it when at a very safe distance.

A "Goodnight" Punch.

However, after Quirin had gone to the canvas twice, McCall went to his corner highly elated, and wildly cheered by the spectators. McCall dashed out for the second round and acted as if he was going to clean up in a hurry. Then there was a lot of wild swinging and wasted effort, but somewhere in the melee McCall got one plumb on the nose, and then, without any further delay, he bid his opponent a courteous "Good night!" and walked out of the ring.

115-pound class—Al Kearney defeated Eddie Burke; decision by judges end of third round. Dave McLeod defeated William Layden; Layden knocked out in second round, and bout stopped by referee.

Anthony Francis defeated Leo Schneider; bout stopped at beginning of third round by referee; Schneider was not strong enough to continue.

125-pound class—Johnny Thompson defeated Ed Harrington, judges' decision. Charley Haefele defeated Steve Koehler, who was disqualified for violation of the rules. Dick Connell defeated Frank Hopkins; judges' decision end of third round. Werner Beillson defeated Elmer Kaufman; judges' decision end of third round. Louis Wahoff defeated Ed O'Connor; judges' decision end of third round.

135-pound class—Sylvester Beishir defeated Robert Patrick; judges' decision end of third round. Jim McCormick defeated Harry Gerber; stopped by referee in third to prevent knockout. Paul Quirin defeated Ralph McCall, who quit in second round. Pat Gilmore defeated Eddie Murphy; stopped by referee in third round.

145-pound class—Ivan Steinitzer defeated Dan Ruether; stopped by referee in third round, Ruether having been knocked down and dazed. Arthur Althoff defeated Joe Quinn; judges' decision third round.

155-pound class—Jim Dougherty defeated John Mulvoy; Mulvoy disqualified for holding. Walter Pepper defeated Len Gross; Gross knocked out in third round.

Heavy-weight class—Frank Stapenhorst defeated Arthur Wickert; decision by judges at end of third round. This was one of the best bouts between heavyweights which has been witnessed among the amateur boxers here for some time.

Doctor Howard Khede officiated as timekeeper.

McLeod Has Won Last 35 Fights Via Knockouts

That's the Reason Tommy Sullivan Picked Young Solsberg as His Opponent.

Archie McLeod, the St. Louis banty, will get a chance to test his real ability as a boxer when he meets Young Solsberg of New York in the feature bout of the show at the Future City A. C., Tuesday evening. McLeod has beaten all the local boys of his weight and for that reason Manager Tommy Sullivan went out of town to line up an opponent for him.

McLeod has been boxing about three years. He started out as an amateur and claims that the lone decision that has been rendered against him in something like 50 fights was obtained by Benny McGovern, the local featherweight king.

McGovern beat McLeod at the Columbus Club two years ago, when both were still amateurs, although on that occasion McGovern outweighed McLeod. In McLeod's last 35 fights he has won via the knockout route. That's quite a record, but Tommy Sullivan backs it up.

Another Win for Revoire.

Eddie Revoire, the St. Louis boy, who created quite an impression here in his two bouts with Art Magirl last winter, has just bagged his fifth victory since the season reopened in Philadelphia. He took on Martin Canole last Tuesday night in the Unconscious City and scored a knockout in less than a minute.

Now Revoire wants to come back to St. Louis and will catch the first train West if local promoters offer him a bout. His other victories were over "Reddy" Holt, Mike Farrell, Eddie Bratton and John Duffy. All went six rounds.

School Athletes Start Training for 6-Mile Run

Entry of McKinley High Runners Is Sought for Long Jaunt Next Month.

Efforts are being made to have the McKinley High School cross-country squad enter the six-mile race that is being planned for the athletes of the four local high schools, but the South Siders have not yet fallen in line with the other schools.

It is planned to start the race at Normandy Grove with the finish at St. Louis University Park. Central, Soldan and Yeatman runners have started training for the race.

The high school basket-ball teams are awaiting the inaugural of the season. Of the five McKinley High School championship players, only three remain. They are French, Fitzgerald and Bryant. Capable substitutes are available, however. Soldan, McKinley and Yeatman expect to have formidable teams in the field.

Officials of the Interscholastic League have reached no decision regarding the awarding of a trophy awarded for the winner of the swimming meet. The Central and Soldan paddlers tied in this meet, and it is probable that the cup will be cut in half and a portion given to each school.

LABOR ON FIELD, INSTEAD OF FINES, IS RICKEY'S IDEA

Browns' Manager Does Not Believe in Taking Player's Money for Infractions of Rules.

By Clarence F. Lloyd.

Because he believes there are more effective ways of disciplining ball players than by fining them, Manager Rickey intends next season to take no money from the Browns as penalties for offenses on or off the field.

"Only as a last resort would I take a player's money," said Rickey to the Post-Dispatch Saturday. "If I did that, I would not only be punishing the player, but maybe his wife and children as well. He's playing baseball for a living, the same as I am, and it would be unjust to fine him."

Although it was pointed out that such men as John McGraw, Frank Chance, John Evers and Roger Bresnahan, when he was manager of the Cardinals, were in the habit of fining players when they did wrong, Rickey said he didn't believe in the system.

Here's the System.

"I do not believe that I should fine a player who fails to run out his hits," he continued. "If a player doesn't do that of his own accord, it means that he hasn't the welfare of the ball club at heart. But if that same player had to report at the ball park the next morning and run out every ball he hit for two hours, it probably would cause him to pursue the elusive hit the next time he got into a game."

This kind of talk indicates that Rickey is planning a long way ahead. It will be almost six months before the athletes assemble ofr the 1914 season, but already he is arranging schemes to get he most out of his ball club.

Will Issue No Dont's.

Rickey has also decided that he will have no set rules during the training season or the playing season. That's because he believes that no two men need the same instructions.

"They'll have to get up in the morning in time to be at the ball park at the time wanted," said Rickey. "As for going to bed at night, they'll have no set time. I don't go to sleep very early myself and won't expect the players to do so either.

"Of course, if I should see the same player strolling into the hotel after midnight or 1 o'clock on more than one occasion in a short period of time, it would create a little suspicion in my mind and I'd probably talk to him. But the fact that a man is out after midnight doesn't necessarily mean that he's been doing something wrong.

"No, I don't intend to put the men on a diet. A toast and egg diet isn't always good for every man. But if I should see a player eating a turnip salad and a piece of mince pie for lunch because he believed that was light, I would correct him.

"Then there are a lot of superstitious ballplayers who eat certain things for breakfast, lunch or dinner because they believe they'll make a base hit from it. I'll probably have something to say about that, too."

The Browns' newest manager hasn't mapped out the program for the players' work yet, but he indicated that they will have plenty to do.

"It won't be necessary to have a long list of rules for the players," he said. "They will have enough to do on the ball field to keep them busy thinking of the game and the team for a while after the sessions have been concluded and after that I dare say they'll be ready to retire."

Johnson and Brennan in a Duel.

Walter Johnson of the Nationals and Add Brennan, the Phillies' southpaw, meet on the Kansas plains in a pitching duel Friday that eventuated in a tie, 0—0, in 10 frames. Both pitchers were found for all of four hits, equally divided. The game was played at Humboldt, Johnson pitching for his home team, Coffeyville.

POST-DISPATCH'S DAILY RECORD OF MARKETS AND FINANCE

MEXICO NEWS PUTS CAUTION IN STOCK TRADING

Opening Is Irregular and Quiet and Reserve Dominates the Market.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial review today, says:

"Largely, no doubt, because of the extraordinary position in Mexico—where tomorrow is election day—the Stock Exchange all but suspended operations this morning. Aspects of that complicated situation, which might otherwise, have caused a decidedly apprehensive movement in stock market values, were counterbalanced by cabled intimations that European governments were bestirring themselves with a view to joint and harmonious action on the part of them and of the United States.

"Trading in stocks was extremely small, and changes in prices—though sometimes fractionally downward—were negligible.

"There was little else in the general news to influence prices. The weekly showing of American bank clearings marked a moderate decline from 1912, when, however, October closed with great commercial activity.

"Week-end mercantile trade reviews gave somewhat varied testimony to the business movement of the week, but continued to report a good volume of business and evidence that supplies were not accumulating in retailers' hands.

"The Government's report of cotton ginned up to the middle of October showed an increase of 83,000 bales over the same period last year.

"At Berlin the Reichsbank's weekly statement testified to a rapid continuance of the rise in the institution's gold reserve. It gained $11,900,000 cash, of which $5,900,000 was gold, and it reduced its note circulation $21,000,000.

"The bank statement indicated that the position was strengthened early in the week, but that it weakened later.

"On the actual week-end returns, loans were slightly increased, while cash holdings, for which a gain was foreshadowed by yesterday's estimates, were reduced $1,700,000.

"As a result, surplus reserves declined $1,300,000. The banks in the Clearing House still, however, show a surplus substantially in excess of this date in 1912 or 1910."

It was a game of hide-and-seek in the wheat market Saturday. First the bulls had a slight advantage, then the bears. At the close the honors were about even.

There was little of importance in the day's news. Foreign markets were quiet, primary receipts were rather heavy, but the cash demand was good for a Saturday market.

Corn futures were irregular on a good weather map and realizing by longs. Cables were strong, but buyers were held in check by reports of purchases of corn in Argentina for shipment to America. Oats were quiet and easy.

The official Liverpool cable said: "The favorable showing by the Modern Miller report and Bradstreet's weekly exports caused realizing at the opening here and prices were ⅝d lower, and following the opening further declined ⅛d to ¼d with offers larger. During the trading shorts were induced to cover by a private report of light American shipments to Liverpool this week and with the good consumption here and free takings by the Continent and firmer Russian offers and firmer Manitoba offers, prices easily advanced. At the close the market was steady and ⅜d to ¼d higher than the low and unchanged to ⅛d lower than yesterday.

"Corn opened ⅛d higer and further advanced ⅜d to ⅞d, with shorts covering freely. The pressure at the docks has been relieved and with the firmness of distant offers of Plate steamers and the firmness in Plate spot here and the good consumption, speculators supported the market. At the close the market was very firm, ⅞d higher than yesterday."

Minneapolis wheat receipts were 339, against 336 last week and 524 last year. Duluth 244, against 202 and 525. Winnipeg 1117, against 1132 and 784. Minneapolis wheat receipts increased 100,000 bu for 1 day.

Local wheat receipts were 61,383 bu, or 1148 sacks, 39 cars local, 10 through; last year, 142,522 bu, or 410 sacks, 88 cars local, 30 through. Corn receipts, 33,600 bu, or 22 cars local, 6 through; last year, 27,965 bu, or 146 sacks, 14 cars local, 9 through. Oats receipts 39,100 bu, or 19 cars local, 4 through; last year 86,700 bu, or 40 cars local, 11 through.

Liverpool wheat closed unchanged, corn ⅞d higher. Paris wheat ¼c lower; flour unchanged to ¼d lower. Antwerp wheat ⅝c lower. Berlin ⅝c higher. Budapest unchanged.

Official returns state that the total wheat importation during August and September into France aggregated 18,584,000 bu. The absence of growers from country markets is noticeable and millers are forced to purchase foreign wheat.

In Germany, owing to the light yield and poor quality, South Germany is freely taking foreign wheat.

New York wired: "The Canadians are not pressing wheat. No. 1 northern is 83½c c. i. f. Buffalo. This is 1 cent up from Thursday. More doing in low grades, which have been sparingly offered. No. 3 sold 79c c. i. f. Buffalo.

A cable from Odessa said: "There is a weak market for freights at all Black Sea ports and with the large fleet awaiting it is expected that this depression will continue. Samples of new corn are being offered, which show excellent quality and color. Shipments should commence in November, if the weather continues favorable."

Minneapolis wired: "Country wheat receipts are better. Demand for cash wheat is fair. Blue stem No. 1 northern is 2 to 2½c over, and velvet chaff 1c. No. 1 northern ¾c to 1¼c over December."

Chicago wired: There is a big demand for cash corn again today for shipment, especially considering the fact that it is Saturday. We know of sales aggregating over 180,000 bu.

Holders of wheat in India continue very firm, and this is largely ascribed to the failures of native good grains. Some improvement is noted in wheat in the Central provinces, as a result of light rains.

Clearances: Wheat 198,000 bu; flour 20,000; corn 90,000; oats 56,000. Wheat and flour equal 288,000.

Chicago wheat cars were 31; corn 100; oats 57. Estimated Monday: wheat 35; corn 112; oats 119.

St. Louis cash wheat closed 1c to 2c higher for No. 2 red and ½c up for lard.

Cash corn steady: Offers were scored and in demand.

Cash oats unchanged: Offers light.

Coal Trade Irregular.

The Black Diamond, in its issue of Saturday, said:

"The national coal market for the last week has been influenced by a general drop of temperature over a wide area and by a growing shortage of cars east and west, but only moderately by a shortage of cars in the Middle West.

"The demand has been mostly on the retailer, who, in some instances, have increased their orders for wholesalers, but in no sense has this brought about a boom in conditions.

"As a matter of fact the market instead of being as strong as is normal at this time of year, things seems to be moving by contrary.

"The indications are that October weather is prophecying an early fall and rather a cold spell, but the retailers and householders do not respond. Hartier indications were that the householder had less coal on hand than is customary or in fact, than is safe.

"Neither the cold weather nor the repeated storage pile seems to have stirred any interest in coal whatever. The cause for this peculiar situation must be traced back to that shortage of money on the part of the individual which was pointed out some weeks ago as a natural consequence of a hot summer and too much of a propensity to spend cash to keep cool. The coal market is fairly small, but it cannot be said to have any snap or vigor.

Cotton Ginned to Oct. 18 Was 6,956,000 Bales.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—The third cotton ginning report of the season, compiled from reports of Census Bureau correspondents and agents throughout the cotton belt and issued at 10 a. m. today by Director William J. Harris, announced that 6,956,583 bales of cotton, counting round as half bales, of the growth of 1913, had been ginned prior to Oct. 18. This includes the results of the most active period of the ginning season, Sept. 25 to Oct. 18, during which, in recent years, more than one-fourth of the entire crop passed through the ginners' hands.

To Oct. 18 last year, 6,873,206 bales, or 51 per cent of the entire crop, had been ginned; in 1911 to that date, 7,758,621 bales, or 49.9 per cent, had been ginned; in 1909 to that date, 6,296,106 bales, or 48.1 per cent of the crop, had been ginned, and in 1906 to that date, 4,931,621 bales, or 38 per cent of the crop, had been ginned.

Included in the total ginnings were 49,024 round bales, compared with 41,745 bales last year, 58,858 bales in 1911, 66,183 bales in 1910, 88,716 bales in 1909 and 118,720 bales in 1908.

The number of Sea Island cotton bales included was 30,880, compared with 15,960 bales last year, 40,303 bales in 1911, 36,482 bales in 1909 and 32,013 bales in 1908.

The following minute was ordered by the Executive Committee of the American Bottle Co. to be spread upon its records:

Adolphus Busch, his work ended, sleeps, and we who are left, mourn a wise and loyal friend.

For many years, throughout the length and breadth of this great land, he has made his presence felt, by his kindly sympathy, by his wonderful business ability, by his clear judgment, and never failing generosity. Wider and wider has this influence reached until he has become, instead of a national, an international character, respected, loved and admired by the people of two countries.

We of the American Bottle Co. (who owe so much to his fertile brain) especially mourn for him, realizing the irreparable loss we have sustained in the death of our friend, our associate and our adviser.

PUBLIC NOTICE.

PUBLIC NOTICE.

State of Missouri, City of St. Louis. In the matter of application of George W. Green for parole: Notice is hereby given that I, George W. Green, convicted of the crime of second degree murder in the City of St. Louis, State of Missouri, on the 16th day of May, 1903, and sentenced to 20 years' imprisonment in the penitentiary at Jefferson City, Mo., where I am now confined, have made application for parole, and will be given a public hearing before the Board of Pardons and Paroles at the office of the deputy warden in said penitentiary on the first Monday in December, 1913, same being the first day of said month, when reasons in favor of or against the granting of said parole will be heard by said Board of Pardons and Paroles. All persons who favor or oppose said application are invited to communicate with said Board on or before said date, giving in writing such facts as they would have considered in this matter. IF YOU LOSE ANYTHING, and will advertise it here, you will surely recover it if found by an honest person. A 3-time ad seldom fails. Remarkable recoveries are brought about every day through this column. Your druggist our agent.

IF YOU FIND ANYTHING, bring it to the Post-Dispatch Lost and Found Bureau, 210-12 North Broadway. Get a claim check. Advertise the article. Reclaim it if the owner does not.

THE LAW—People who find lost articles are interested in knowing that the State law (sections 8263 and 8273, R. S., 1909) is strict in requiring them to seek the owners through advertisement and otherwise, and that a failure to do so, if same can be proven, involves a severe penalty. (53)

MAYORALTY BETS MAKE MITCHEL A 10 TO 4 FAVORITE

McCall Supporters in New York Election Fail to Take 2 to 1 Offers.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—There has been another slump in the betting odds on McCall in Wall street. At one time yesterday the price quoted was 10 to 4 that Mitchel would be elected Mayor. Numerous bets, mostly small in amount, were made at 2 to 1 on Mitchel.

In the afternoon a man appeared at Fred Schumm's place on Stone street and wanted to place $5000 on the fusion candidate at 2 to 1, but no one wanted to take the McCall end of the bet. A stylishly dressed middle-aged woman invaded the crowd of brokers on the curb and tried in vain to place a $50 bet on Mitchel at the prevailing odds.

One of the largest bets of the day was $3000 to $1000 on Mitchel. The McCall end was taken by a representative of a prominent Stock Exchange firm. Two thousand dollars was bet at 10 to 9 on Mets and a like amount was placed at the same price on McEnany.

An offer was made of $1000 even that Mitchel will not carry the five boroughs. Another offer of $500 at evens was made that he will get 30,000 plurality and still another that he will carry Kings County by 25,000 plurality.

On the curb a man who frequently handles a lot of Tammany money made a wager of $100 to $600 that Sulzer will not beat the Socialist candidate for Assembly in the Sixth by 300 votes.

Late in the evening an offer was made in Schumm's of $100 even that McCall will receive as many votes as did the late Mayor Gaynor when he ran for the same office.

ELOPES AT 17 AND GETS DIVORCE AT 19

Mrs. F. A. Mathews Obtains Custody of Child and Alimony From Husband Aged 20.

To Mrs. Florence A. Mathews, who eloped from Nashville, Tenn., where she was a 17-year-old student in 1911, and married Calvin C. Mathews, 18 years old, at St. Charles, Mo., was granted a divorce, custody of her child and $30 a month alimony by Circuit Judge Cave Friday.

Mrs. Mathews said her husband told her he did not love her and was sorry he married her. She said he failed to support her and forced her to change her place of residence 20 times in their brief marital career. Her father, George M. Jackson, a wealthy stove manufacturer of Indianapolis, gave her husband a position at a liberal salary, she said.

To Mrs. Julia M. Ballard was granted a divorce from William J. Ballard and $50 a month alimony by Judge Rassieur, on her testimony that he struck her and neglected her.

Divorces were asked by Louise M. from E. R. McDonald; Edith from Julian Hume; Maymie from Allan W. Skinner and Emma G. from Charles H. Vogan, all alleging desertion.

WALL STREET FOR VANDERLIP'S PLAN OF CENTRAL BANK

New York Financiers Say It a Great Improvement Over Owen-Glass Measure.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—Wall street bankers yesterday practically gave unanimous approval to the currency plan submitted to the Senate Committee on Thursday by Frank A. Vanderlip, president of the National City Bank. A. Barton Hepburn, chairman of the currency commission, American Banking Association, said:

"It is hardly necessary to ask an expression of opinion of the New York bankers, since practically all of them are on record, both in speeches and interviews, as favoring the principal features of the Vanderlip plan, particularly the idea of a central bank with branches. There seems to be no doubt that the main features would be accepted by the New York banks."

Sends Telegram to Wilson.

John Harsen Rhoades telegraphed to President Wilson as follows:

"I earnestly hope that the administration will unanimously indorse Mr. Vanderlip's proposal for a central bank. In it lies the true solution of our banking and currency problem. Party pledges should be kept, but the plank in the Democratic platform opposing a central bank was placed there to support the views of those who feared so-called 'money trust' control.

"If we amend Mr. Vanderlip's proposal by life appointments, with an age limit for eligibility as well as expiration of service, we would probably eliminate any possibility of political influence and Money Trust control, and would put the court of finance in its proper place—on a plane with the Supreme Court."

Prevent Undue Depression.

Alexander J. Hemphill, president of the Guaranty Trust Co., said:

"Mr. Vanderlip's plan is ideal as it places our currency system on a scientific basis. The measure would prevent undue depression and expenses. It also permits mobilization of reserves, which guards against panics, and it affords an acceptance market for rediscounting. The provision relating to United States Government bonds is good, because the time is passed when a 2-per-cent Government bond can be kept at par without resorting to artificial means, as we have been doing."

William A. Nash, chairman of the Corn Exchange Bank, says:

"The Vanderlip plan is a great improvement over the Owen-Glass measure. Its general provisions are superior to those of the latter."

BUCKET BRIGADE OF CAR PASSENGERS SAVE HOUSE

Motorman and Conductor Stop and Lead Fire Fight in the County.

The crew and passengers of an eastbound Clayton car resolved themselves into a volunteer fire brigade at 4:30 p. m. Friday and saved a bungalow near the McKnight road a short distance west of Clayton.

The bungalow, which is vacant, is owned by Mrs. Charles Black. Motorman Burnett saw smoke pouring from the kitchen windows. He stopped his car and he and Conductor Casey ran to the house. They found the kitchen in flames.

Running back to the car they told the passengers. All formed a bucket brigade and put out the fire before much damage was done. The flames apparently had started in a pile of rags and newspapers in the closet.

MAN FIRST WIFE TRIED TO KILL WEDS AGAIN

Albert Baker, Who Had Former Mate Sent to Prison, Takes Another.

By Associated Press.

DECATUR, Ill., Oct. 25.—Albert Baker, who narrowly escaped being murdered by his first wife, decided to brave matrimony again and was married yesterday at Pana to Mrs. Minnie Rock. It was the fourth marriage for Mrs. Rock and the second for Baker.

About five years ago, Baker was shot and left for dead by his first wife, who had hoped to obtain his insurance money. She served a term in the penitentiary and died a short time ago.

DR. REINTSCH IN TOKIO

He and Ambassador Guthrie Are Luncheon Guests.

TOKIO, Japan, Oct. 25.—Dr. Paul Samuel Reintsch of Madison, Wis., the new United States Minister to China arrived here today. He and George W. Guthrie of Pittsburg, American Ambassador to Japan, were the guests of a number of distinguished Japanese at luncheon.

Both American diplomats spoke impressively of the friendship between the Far Eastern countries and the United States and declared that the exercise of wisdom, patient and good will would eventually bring the East and the West to a mutual understanding.

BISHOPS TO FILL PULPITS

Visiting bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church will preach sermons at all the denomination's churches in St. Louis Sunday.

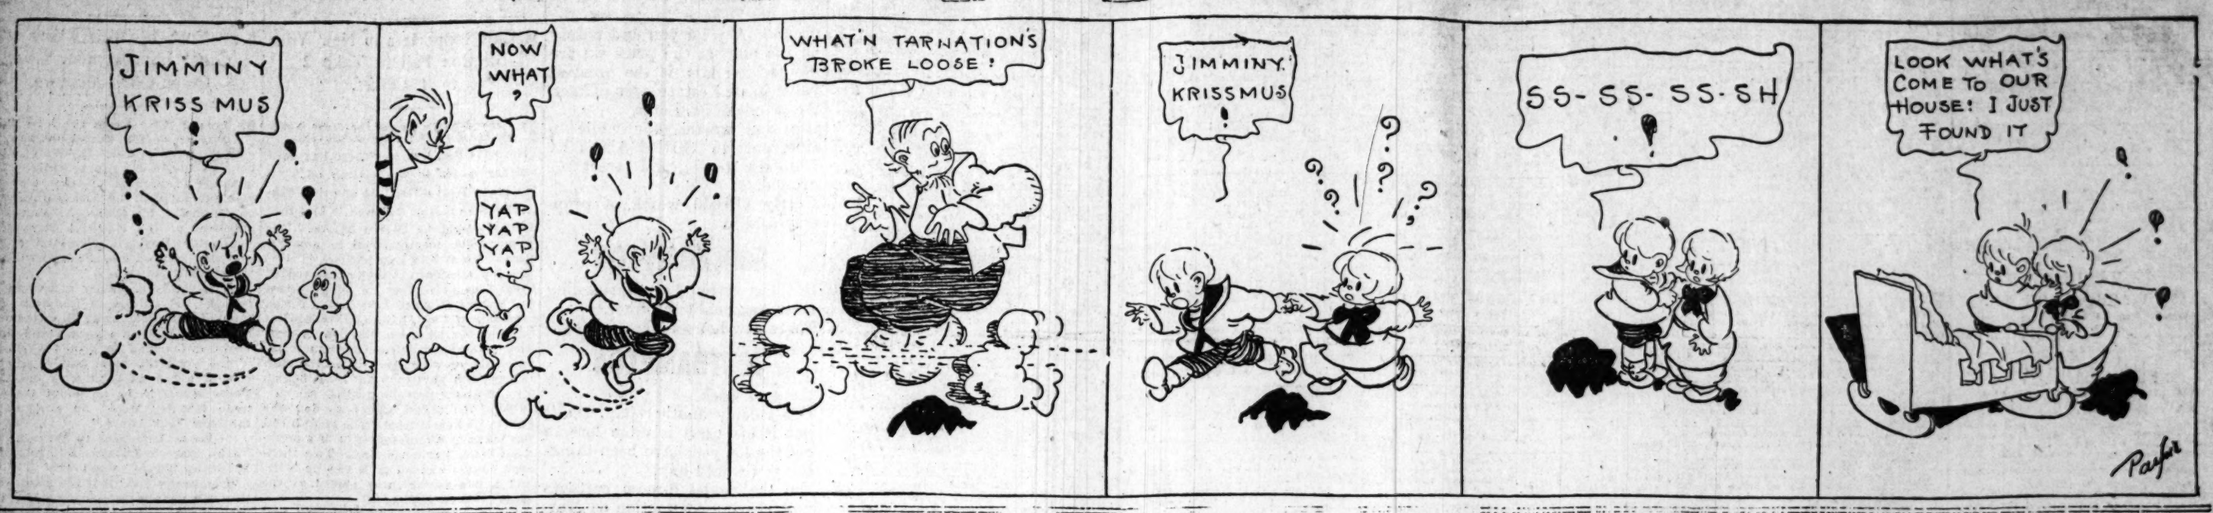

Bishop N. Luccock of Helena, Mont., will deliver a sermon at Union M. E. Church, of which he was formerly pastor. Bishop John L. Nuelsen of Zurich, Switzerland, will preach at the church named for his father, Nuelsen Memorial, Jefferson avenue and Pestalozzi street. Bishops McDowell and Anderson will preach at Chouteau Place M. E. Church, at the dedication of a new pipe organ for which Andrew Carnegie paid half. Resident Bishop Charles W. Smith will preach at Carondelet and Elmbank German churches.

The JARR FAMILY

By ROY L. McCARDELL.

Mr. Jarr Finds Deception's Path Is Profusely Strewn With Tacks.

"I HEAR you were given a handsome present," said Mrs. Jarr, when Mr. Jarr got home after getting rid of the fish Gus' Dill Pickle Fishing Club had given to him to have mounted.

Mr. Jarr made no reply. He couldn't think of one so quickly.

"I said I heard your friends had made you a handsome present," repeated Mrs. Jarr. "I'm glad somebody thinks something of us, even if it is that man Rangle and that awful Gus at the corner, and all the rest of that sort of people you will associate with!"

"Well, they may be 'that sort of people'," said Mr. Jarr, rallying to the defense, "but at least they thought enough of us to make us a little present after our return. I notice your friends didn't!"

"Never mind them," said Mrs. Jarr. "What did that saloon crowd give you?"

"Oh, come, my dear!" cried Mr. Jarr. "Saloon crowd? Why, they aren't bad fellows at all. Rangle's a good, decent citizen. So are Slavinsky and all the rest. And Gus is as charitable and good-hearted"—

"Well, never mind singing their praises. What did they give you?" asked Mrs. Jarr.

Mr. Jarr could not bring himself to admit it was a monstrous and all-pervading ling—a fish long out of water—to stuff and mount. So he merely mumbled it was a loving cup.

"A loving cup?" repeated Mrs. Jarr. "Why couldn't they have given you a chest of silver? A loving cup? What use is a loving cup? Oh, of course, something connected with drinking. Where is it?"

"Getting inscribed," murmured Mr. Jarr, getting deeper into the tangled web of falsehood.

"Well, when it is inscribed (with an advertisement of Gus' wines, liquors and cigars, I suppose!) don't bring it into this house. Let it repose in the lair of the chief donor!"

Mr. Jarr breathed easier. This was getting out of the trouble he had fibbed himself into. Then Mrs. Jarr looked up and asked:

"Is it colonial or new art?"

"Huh?" asked Mr. Jarr.

"I asked you if the loving cup those persons gave you was severely plain colonial—which is really modified Grecian, Mr. Dinkston says—or one of the more florid patterns of the new art—no, I am wrong—the new art is more Etruscan."

"Oh, this cup is Etruscan—very Etruscan," said Mr. Jarr.

"Well, it would be nice for a centerpiece for flowers. No, that wouldn't do," replied Mrs. Jarr, thinking with knit brows. "If it was used for a centerpiece for flowers when we had company to dinner some of the guests would be bound to see the inscription—that is, unless I could trail some of the ferns down over the lettering—but you know how nosy some people are. I'd die of mortification if any friend of mine should look closely at it and read: 'From Gus, Retail Liquor Dealer, Family Trade a Specialty;' Ugh!"

"Well, you know, I couldn't refuse a gift. But, just as you say, I'd better not bring it home."

"We could put it on the top shelf of the parlor mantel," said Mrs. Jarr, "and turn the inscription to the wall."

"Ah," ventured Mr. Jarr, "I'm sorry to say it will be inscribed on both sides. One side will read 'From the Dill Pickle Fishing Club.' And on the other side will be the names of the donors, Gus and the bunch."

"If it's a solid silver loving cup I can have the engraving taken off," said Mrs. Jarr.

"Oh, it's not solid, only plated, you know!" cried Mr. Jarr quickly.

"I might have known it. A plated loving cup! That's how much these sorts of people love their friends. It's emblematic, a loving cup of base metal!—Willie! What have you got? What is that dreadful thing?"

This sudden inquiry was due to the fact that Master Willie Jarr stood in the doorway, like the boy on the cast-iron fountains, holding a mighty fish in his tiny arms.

"I just got it from Izzy Slavinsky," cried the boy. "I gave him my roller skates for it. He says he knows a man will stuff it for us for $10."

"Papa, make him take the horrible thing away!" cried Mrs. Jarr.

But Mr. Jarr was two blocks away and heading for furthest north.

A WOMAN'S WAY.

Funny.

"YOU certainly got out of that house quietly," said the burglar's companion.

"Yes, I came down on the dumb-waiter."

Of Course.

"HELLO! Practicing your piano lesson?"

"No; I'm studying aviation."

"How's that?"

"Trying to conquer the air, you know."

Just Like That.

"WHAT is your name?" asked the mistress of the new maid.

"Minnie, mum."

"All right, but we expect a maximum of work; don't forget!"

Fell into an eddying poul.
Quoth he with a shiver:
"I called on the river,
But, oh, my reception was cool!"

Another young man in Calais
Was learning the game of croquais.
He crawled through a wicket
And cried: "That's the ticket!
You see, I am learning to plais!"

Another young man in Marseilles
Went fishing to tell some tall tailles
Of the fish that he caught,
But was dished when he saught
To weigh them upon their own scailles!

Another young man in Cologne
His fate was inclined to bemogne.
Quoth he, with a sigh:
"All the girls pass me high;
I'm fated to live all alogne!"

Another young man in St. Croix
His talents in art would emploix,
When the critics who viewed
All his paintings were riewed,
He cried: "I'm a Cubist! Oix Yoix!"

Another young man in Toulouse
Thought up a jim-dandy excouse
To account for the creaking
His joints made by squeaking:
"You see, all my joints are toulouse!"

HAZEN CONKLIN.

One on the Butcher? No, Two!

MRS. NEWLYWED did not know much about housekeeping, and was always cheated when she went to the near-by butcher store after her supplies.

After a particularly tough bird had been with difficulty disposed of she went once more to the butcher and purveyor of macadamized meat and said:

"How many young chickens have you today?"

The butcher said: "I have but three in the shop."

"I want two of the toughest you have," said Mrs. Newlywed.

The butcher was surprised, but brought out two and assured her that these were the toughest in the place. Had been there for a week or more, he said.

"Well," said the lady after much thought, "I'll take the other one, please!"

She Gave It Away.

A WOMAN wants to get rid of her husband's old clothes in the spring and he wants to save about five suits in case he goes fishing.

He never goes fishing, but he hates to part with his old clothes.

Mr. and Mrs. Wombat were having the annual battle.

"I think I'll give away this old suit, dear. It's seven years old."

"But I might want to wear that suit to go fishing in."

"Not this suit. This is a dress suit, dear."—Kansas City Journal.

Et Tu, Brute?

A NEWLY-MARRIED pair had escaped from their demonstrative friends and were on their way to the station, when the carriage stopped. The bridegroom looked out of the window impatiently.

"What's the matter, driver?" he called.

"The horse has cast a shoe, sir," was the reply.

"Great Scott!" groaned the bridegroom. "Even the horse!"

Stories St. Louisans Tell

THE TWO JOHN PHILPOT CURRANS.

JOHN H. CURRAN, former State Commissioner of Immigration, was named originally John Philpot Curran, after one of his ancestors, the noted Irish patriot. He disliked the middle name and in boyhood changed it to Howard. Curran tells this story:

"There was an old lady who was a great admirer of John Philpot Curran, who defended Robert Emmet and other patriots and with whose daughter Emmet was in love. She discovered that my baptismal name was John Philpot Curran and refused to forgive me for having changed it.

"'So,' she said to me, 'you are descended from John Philpot Curran, are you?'

"'I am,' I admitted.

"'Oh,' sighed the old lady, 'what a descent!'"

City Gossip.

"YOU'RE looking out of temper this morning," remarked Avenue.

"That's because I'm a cross street," Street replied. "Besides, I had an unpleasant experience last night. A street light fell on me. By the way, what's the matter with Elevated?"

"Don't know. He's up in the air, but why I can't say. I never could understand that fellow. He's always 'way over my head. I'm afraid he's not satisfied with his station."

"He's no worse than Tower. That fellow looks down on all of us. Has his head way up in the clouds."

"Yes," replied Avenue, "he has a high opinion of himself, and if he ever does take a tumble—why, whats' the matter?"

"Nothing," replied Street, "only my foot's asleep."

Good!

"MARIE, can you cook?"

"No, Jack. Can you afford to keep a motor car?"

"No, dear."

So they did not marry, and they lived happily ever afterward.

An Infallible Sign.

"MY wife will know I drank too much at the banquet."

"Why, you are walking straight enough."

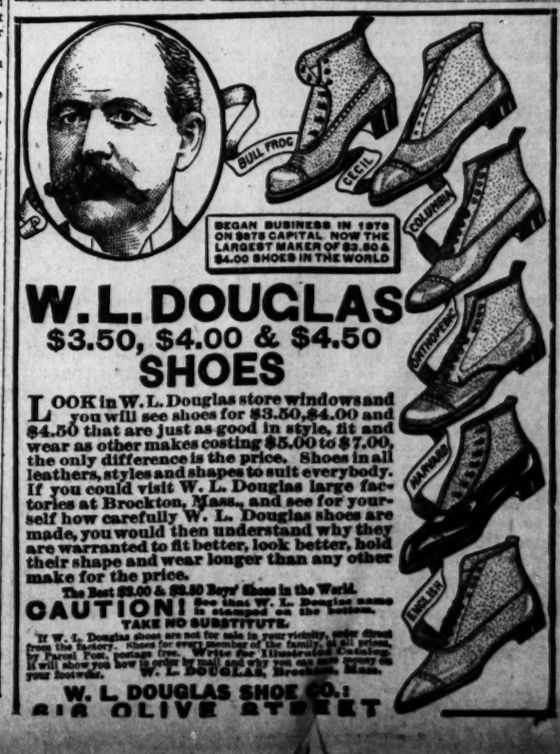

"But look at the rotten umbrella I picked out."

Poor Gink!

"I'VE just been to the hospital to see Smith. His automobile overturned, you know."

"Is he badly hurt?"

"Oh, no; just a bit upset."
